THE SYDNEY UNIVERSITY REVIEW.

The third number of the Sydney University Review contains articles by competent men on subjects of general interest. The first is by Sir Alfred Stephen on "Criminal Law in New South Wales." The six English statutes passed in 1861, consolidating and amending previous enactments, have been substantially adopted in the other colonies, "In 1882, as if we had been asleep, or all unconscious of the advance in criminal law amendment which each year witnesses at home, we are administering an imperfect statutory code half a century old, abandoned in every other Australian community." A few examples of the reforms needed are given by the writer. For instance, in the statutes of 1827 the words "attempt to administer poison" have been decided not to include giving poison to another person for him to administer. Statutes maliciously impeding a shipwrecked person who is attempting to save his life is an offence, but not impeding another person who attempts to save that life, as in the statutes of 1861. The recent English measures were prepared with great care, the select committee appointed by the Lords containing such illustrious names as Lords Campbell, Cranworth, Wensleydale, Chelmsford, and Kingsdown, a guarantee of ability and knowledge of law. The colony might very safely have copied such eminent authorities, instead of retaining still an antiquated code. A valuable report appeared in 1871, and can be seen in "Votes and Proceedings" for that year, with Sir Alfred Stephen's name attached as President of the Commission, with the signatures of Messrs. Windeyer, Manning, Butler, Iceton, and Barker as his colleagues, and Mr. Alexander Oliver for secretary. Subsequently it appears three attempts at legislation were made, but unsuccessfully. The reformers of those days must be now getting weary of their hope deferred, and Sir Alfred Stephen dare not predict any practical result "until a Ministry shall arise which, impressed with the value of the reform, shall possess equally the will and the power to carry it through both Houses of Parliament without mutilation." That seems to imply that somebody heretofore has lacked either the will or the power, on both—a charge which ought to carry some weight, coming from the Lieutenant-Governor of the colony.

The second article is by Dr. Pearson, Bishop of Newcastle, and is headed "A Plea for the Study of Philosophy." The author is quite right in his surmise that astronomy and geology are more popular than psychology or ethics, and equally so in his pungent suggestion that "a homily on the art of the rapid accumulation of wealth by a successful financier" would prove more attractive still. But he also gives the reason for that, so far as Australians are concerned, in his admission that "pioneers can scarcely be expected to devote much attention to analysis." Although a large proportion of our people are in comparatively easy circumstances, there has not yet been time enough for the formation of a numerous leisured and cultured class. Most men are busy with the practical work of life until old age, or at least mature manhood, and when they have the leisure they lack habits, and perhaps the disposition for study. Even the United Kingdom, with thirty-five millions of people, and an accumulation of national wealth which is the creation of a thousand years, does not realize Dr. Pearson's ideal, for he quotes Hamilton with approval, to the effect that "Socrates brought down philosophy from the clouds,—the English have degraded her to the kitchen." The Scotch have certainly won greater distinction in the sphere of metaphysics than their more numerous English neighbours; and, perhaps, they will bring some of the old leaven along with them to this land which they are helping to settle and redeem. There is no reason why the University of Sydney should not aspire to a chair of mental science as cognate to the study of logic. "Nations," says Dr. Pearson, "need something more in their rulers than the pertinacious advocacy of local claims to national revenue"—a hard hit at a too common idea of political philosophy—and we hope he may soon be able to fulfil the promise with which he closes a thoughtful and well-written article. "He has only to add that he will say Floreat Academia with even more heartiness than he does now when Academia has said Floreat Philosophia."

The two articles on water supply by Professor Stephens and Mr. Oliver have already been noticed in our columns, and will, no doubt, be read with much attention by residents in the interior and by thoughtful people in the capital. Mr. Duncan's paper on the formation of Great Britain will be taken to be geological instead of historical previous to perusal; but perhaps he had some scruple about adopting Dr. Green's title, "The Making of England." It contains a well-chosen epitome of information on the primitive races of the mother country, from very early times down to the eleventh century. Mr. Edward Meyrick contributes the fifth article on Charles Darwin, which may be read side by side with Dr. Pearson's on Philosophy. He applies the principle of evolution to the systematic study of the sciences generally. What will the learned Bishop say to the following passage: "As it is impossible to say how soon it may be found necessary to make provision for the teaching of moral philosophy in connection with the Sydney University, I cannot too strongly urge the importance of realizing before it is too late that it would be worse than useless to place such teaching in the hands of anyone who is not prepared to renounce effete systems and adapt himself to the new standpoint?" We fear the Senate of the University would find great difficulty in deciding what the "effete systems" are here so sweepingly condemned; and Mr. Meyrick should be a little more definite, if he could be so without becoming too warlike.

The paper on Pauperism, contributed by the Rev. James Jefferis, deals with a large subject, and one which is growing in importance with the increasing number of inhabitants. Perhaps no country has yet been able to exemplify correct principles in a national system of charitable relief, so as effectually to reach the class intended without breaking down the power of self-help. The report of 1873-4 is a very able and comprehensive one, but the legislation based on it was kept in abeyance for seven years, and now has not grown to much magnitude in the form of the State Children Relief Act of last year, happily beginning to be more operative at length. In the opinion of Mr. Jefferis "pauperism is a moral disease. No amount of intellectual attainments will cure it." Unless the proper moral remedy is also included in the intellectual training, as it ought in every proper system of education. The aggregation of immense numbers of children in large establishments is one of the worst methods of home training, both for moral, literary, and domestic results, and in condemning that Mr. Jefferis stands on firm ground.

The remaining article is from the pen of Mr. W. Wilkins, under the heading "A French View of American Public School Education." Six competent French Commissioners were sent to Philadelphia in the Exhibition year, for the purpose of studying primary education in the States upon the spot. Like everybody else, the Commissioners were struck with the part played by American Common schools in the political education of the people, and with the facility the States have shown in absorbing the streams of population from Europe. "Far from restricting," he says, "as much as possible, by confining it within the limits of strict necessity—of elementary and obligatory education—this generosity goes so far as to declare free for all of both sexes the establishments for superior primary instruction, and even for secondary instruction." New South Wales has not done that, but she has made a liberal curriculum cheap to all, with special help in special cases. Mr. Wilkins discusses only part of the report in his paper, and apparently intends returning to it subsequently. Taken as a whole this number of the Review must be pronounced the best of the three in matter and form; the subjects are well chosen, and distributed with some care for the special qualifications of the writers, and the tone of the papers is fairly well sustained.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—TUESDAY, AUGUST 8.

THIRD TERM, 1882.

Banco Court.—(Before their Honors the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice WINDEYER.)

LUCAS V. THE MINISTER OF WORKS.

The argument in this case was resumed and concluded.

This was an action for compensation for land at Darling Harbour, resumed by the Government.

The action was tried at Darlinghurst before the Chief Justice last sittings. The jury assessed the value the land at much below the value put on it by the Government.

Mr. Pilcher and Mr. Want, instructed by Messrs. Allen and Allen, for the plaintiff, now moved for a rule nisi for a new trial, on the grounds which appear from the judgment of their Honors.

His Honor Sir J. MARTIN, C.J., said that very little stress was laid by counsel for the plaintiff on the ground taken that the verdict was against the evidence, and from that he inferred that there were no great expectations that the rule would be granted on that ground. It was well understood that in order to obtain a rule on that ground the evidence must greatly preponderate, and he certainly could not say in this case that the verdict was so contrary to the evidence that the rule should go on that ground, nor did he say that the verdict was against the evidence at all. The amount claimed by the plaintiff was very large, nearly £80,000, for a leasehold interest in something more than one acre of land. The jury found for a very much less amount; and although the difference between these sums was very great, yet looking at the evidence before the jury, he could not say that the jury came to a wrong conclusion in giving the verdict they did. He thought the rule should be refused on that ground. It was then contended that he was wrong in telling the jury that if they thought that the value of the property taken by the Government was less than the amount put upon it by the Government valuator, they might find a smaller sum than such valuation; that they were bound not to go below the limit fixed by the valuation. That contention arose from a consideration of two Acts of Parliament, 44 Vict. No. 16, and 45 Vict. No. 26. By section 15 of the former Act it was enacted "the issue to be tried in any such action shall be whether the claimant is entitled to a larger sum by way of compensation than the amount of the valuation, and if so as to what sum. And if upon the trial of the said action the verdict shall be of a greater sum than the amount of the said valuation, the costs of the action shall be borne by the Minister." The question was, whether, looking at the whole of this section, the Legislature did not contemplate that the jury should have the power to award a smaller sum than that adopted by the valuator. The first part of the section was antagonistic to that view, because it only spoke of cases where the plaintiff was entitled to a larger sum; in other words, how much more he was entitled to. If the section stopped there, the plaintiff's contention would be a good one, but it went on to say—"but if the verdict shall be for a sum equal to or less than such valuation, then the costs shall be borne by the claimant." It appeared to him to follow, that the jury would be able to return a verdict for less than the valuation; it was a consequence of their finding for less that they should have power to find for less. It seemed to him that the jury in a case of this sort had power to find a verdict for less than the Government valuation. It was said that the 2nd section of the Amending Act, which laid down in reference to cases after the passing of it the rule to the effect he had mentioned, that it was an implied declaration that the same rule could not be applied to cases brought before the passing of that Act. It was assumed that these two sections were identical; but there were things in the new Act which were not in the old Act. It provided that "the jury shall determine the amount of compensation without being bound in any way by the amount of the valuation notified to such claimant, and without reference to any alteration in such value arising from the establishment of railway or other public works upon or for which such land was resumed." That was an enactment made by the new Act distinct from the provisions of the old Act. There being that difference between the two sections, the argument that the new Act implied that the previous Act did not allow a verdict for less than the valuation fell to the ground. He was therefore of opinion, as he was at the trial, that he was right in telling the jury that they could find for a smaller amount than the Government valuation. The rule could not be granted on those grounds. As to the grounds of misdirection, he was of opinion that in estimating the value of the plaintiff's land, the jury could not take into account the proximity of the land to the railway; they could not take into account the frontage or access by Allen-street. The only contention was about crossing at Allen-street. There were no general observations about a right to cross. There were two things, the right to frontage, and the right to cross the railway. He told the jury that there was no just right, except upon application to the Commissioner of Railways and permission granted by him, which would give the plaintiff a right to use the railway so as to make it a frontage, but that, as it was not a matter of right, the plaintiff could not use it for the purpose of increasing the amount of compensation he was to receive for his land. If he was not entitled to this frontage, he could not regard it as an element in the value. So, as to the right to a crossing at Allen-street; he told the jury that it was not proved the plaintiff had any right. That was the only ruling to the jury as to this right of crossing. The Court had been referred to sections of the Railway Act, for the purpose of showing that in certain cases proprietors of land had certain rights to demand gates, bridges, culverts, &c., over the railway. No doubt under those sections if a railway was run through a person's land, or cutting him off from access to a highway, he could demand a facility to go on to the highway, there must be reasonable access. So if a person had certain access to a highway and was interrupted by the railway, that would be an interruption of the use of his land, caused by the construction of the railway. If a person was possessed of a large or small piece of land, and a railway was carried through it, he was entitled to have certain facilities under this 93rd section. Was any railway taken through the plaintiff's land? Was he interrupted in the exercise of any right so as to entitle him to any facility of going across it? He had before him the plaintiff's lease from John Harris, which described the land as being bounded by the Government railway fence; another of the boundaries was Allen-street, up to the railway fence, so that by the description in the lease from the proprietor of the estate, Allen-street was stated to be terminated at the railway fence, and there was a plan on the lease which showed Allen-street extending no further than the railway fence. This placed it beyond a doubt that what the plaintiff got was not a general access to the water, but a piece of land having no access to the water, and no frontage to the water. If the railway had been carried between the portion of the land having water frontage and such water frontage, there would be an interruption of Mr. Harris to the water frontage, but what Mr. Harris had and what Mr. Lucas had were two very different things. The Court was not concerned to inquire whether the Government compensated Mr. Harris for his frontage. Mr. Lucas had nothing but the piece of land bounded in the way described in the lease. He had no right to the water frontage given him by Mr. Harris, supposing it was his to give. He was right in telling the jury to shut out from their consideration anything of the sort. It was said that he was wrong in telling the jury that if the plaintiff's claim was exorbitant and excessive, the jury need not give more than the strict amount necessary to compensate the plaintiff for the loss of the land. He was of opinion that he was right in telling the jury that they were not bound to take that liberal view as to the amount of compensation they would award that they would in the usual cases. He told the jury that when land was taken under an Act of this kind, an arbitrary Act, and contrary to the will of the owner, that although by the statute a person was only entitled to claim the value of the land, yet the jury ought to estimate that value liberally; that in some cases the amount should be much larger than in others; that there was no hard and fast limit laid down by the statute. But that if they thought there was an attempt to overreach the Government by claiming more than the plaintiff was entitled to, the jury might confine their finding to the bare value. He thought he was right in this ruling. The rule must be discharged.

Mr. Justice WINDEYER said that if he entertained any doubt as to what the decision of the Court should be, he should be disposed to grant a rule nisi. As he had no doubt whatever upon the points raised, he thought it would be wrong to grant it. The rule should be refused on all the grounds. The first ground, that the verdict was against the evidence, was not argued. There was evidence on both sides, and the rule should be refused on that ground. With regard to the second point taken in the memorandum, that it was left for the jury to find for a lesser amount than that offered by the Government, he had no doubt whatever. The point was not a new one to him, for it had come before him in many cases of a similar kind under the same Act. No doubt some argument might be raised on the first part of the 15th section; but the latter part contemplates a lesser sum being awarded by the jury. Reading the whole section together, the meaning was clear. But supposing the plaintiff's contention were right, that would not entitle him to a new trial, or to the costs of the first trial. The question raised by the 3rd and 4th grounds, as to whether the plaintiff had a frontage to the railway, had been already decided by the Court in a previous case. With reference to the alleged misdirection by the Chief Justice, stated in the fourth ground, as to the plaintiff's right to cross the railway, he had been somewhat undecided as to what view to take. That direction was given with reference to the facts of the case, and his Honor said it was given with reference to plaintiff's right to cross at Allen-street. Certain sections were referred to by counsel for the plaintiff, which give the plaintiff right to claim permission to cross the line. Looking at section 93 of the Railway Act, it was clear to him that the plaintiff had no such right. The right was to demand a crossing where the land had been damaged by an interruption of a user. The plaintiff had no such right when he got his lease. It was not enough to say that the Commissioner might have granted permission; the plaintiff's right must depend upon a right which had been interfered with. Apart from this a Judge was not bound, in putting before a jury the facts of a case, to direct their attention to every possible mode in which the land might have been beneficially used. A mere omission to make such directions was not a ground for a new trial. With regard to the direction that the jury might confine themselves to the exact value of the land, the jury were not bound to give more. If they had reason to believe there had been an attempt to impose upon the public, the jury might be reminded that they were not bound to give more than the strict market value of the land.

Rule refused.

ERSKINE V. WILSON AND ANOTHER.

This was a District Court appeal. Verdict for the plaintiff. No counsel appeared for the defendant to move. Mr. Heydon appeared for the plaintiff to show cause.

The case was struck out.

LEE AND ANOTHER V. CASTNER.

Appeal from the decision of Mr. District Court Judge Josephson.

Mr. Salomons, Q.C., and Mr. Bruce Smith, appeared for plaintiffs, to move; Mr. Rogers, for the defendant, showed cause.

The defendant sold to the plaintiffs his interest in a publication. The plaintiffs brought the present action for fraudulent representation made by the defendant that the publication had a certain circulation. At the trial the plaintiffs tendered evidence for the purpose of showing the fraudulent nature of the representation; that the defendant had also made other fraudulent representations in effecting the sale to him, as to the amount of the book debts, and as to certain blocks, part of the plant of the paper. This evidence was rejected by the Judge. A new trial was now moved for on the ground that the evidence rejected ought to have been admitted.

The COURT made the rule absolute.

RE ATWELL AND LUCAS.

This was a case stated by the Licensing Court, Sydney.

Mr. Salomons and Mr. Rogers appeared for the informer.

The COURT decided that the onus of proof, that liquor sold at a time prohibited by the Licensing Act was sold to a traveller or lodger lay on the person charged, and not on the informer or complainant.

[We reserve a fuller report of this important decision until to-morrow's issue.]

In Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.—(Before his Honor Sir GEORGE INNES and a special jury of twelve).

BROWNE AND OTHERS V. M'ELHONE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Owen, Mr. C. E. Pilcher, Mr. J. H. Want, and Mr. F. L. S. Smythe, instructed by Mr. John Elliot, of Singleton, for the plaintiffs; Mr. J. B. Salomons, Q.C., Mr. Armstrong, Mr. C. J. Manning, and Mr. A. H. Simpson, instructed by Messrs. Gannon and M'Laughlin for the defendants.

The parties to this suit are all members of the family of the late John Browne, of Singleton, the plaintiffs being Thos. Harvey Browne, William Charles Browne, and Arthur David Browne; and the defendants being John M'Elhone, and Mary Jane M'Elhone, his wife, Henry Williams, and Emma Williams, his wife.

The statement of the plaintiffs was that John Browne, late of Macquarie-place, Singleton, in the colony of New South Wales, was at the time of his death possessed of real and personal estate of very large value, and that on the 18th July, 1881, he being of sound mind, made and executed his last will and testament, dated the 18th July, 1881, which will was duly attested legally, and therein appointed the before-mentioned plaintiffs as trustees and executors thereof. On the 22nd November, 1881, the said Mr. John Browne died at Singleton, a widower, without having altered or revoked the said will. That on the 6th December, 1881, the plaintiffs caused to be inserted in the Government Gazette notice of their intention to apply for probate of the said will, and on the 13th December entered a caveat against probate being granted to the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs nevertheless allege that probate of said will ought to be granted to them, and request same may be granted to them accordingly, together with costs, &c.

The defendants in the responsive allegation said that the deceased was about 78 years of age at the date of his death. For two or three years previously to his death he suffered from congestion of the brain. Either from this cause or old age, during that time he was weak in his intellect, and, in fact, imbecile. During the time mentioned he was quite unable to manage his own affairs, and apparently was influenced in any direction by those around him. During the last years of the testator's life he made wills repeatedly. On the 18th June, 1874, the deceased executed a document purporting to be a will which was prepared by Richard Dalton, a certificated conveyancer, of Singleton, by which he conferred benefits on the defendants. Again in 1876 the said Mr. John Browne had three draft wills prepared by Albert John Gould, solicitor, of Singleton, and by Richard Dalton, in which the same benefits were conferred on his two daughters. None of the said draft wills were ever known to be executed. In 1876 a document purporting to be a will was prepared for the testator by Messrs. Gannon and M'Laughlin, of Sydney, solicitors, and was duly executed by him—in this one he increased the benefits bestowed on his two daughters. On the 22nd November, 1879, the 30th August, 1880, and on the 18th July, 1881, he made three wills, in which no mention was made of his two daughters. The last of such documents purported to revoke all former wills. The testator up to the time of his death professed great affection for his two daughters. For some years prior to his death the testator and his unmarried daughter, Frances Browne, resided together at Singleton. The plaintiffs were constantly going to Singleton to see the deceased, and he was in fact completely under their influence. The defendants assert that the testator's assent to the will, bearing date 18th July, 1881, was obtained by undue influence on the part of the plaintiffs and Frances Browne. Under the circumstances above stated the defendants deny that the testator, being of sound mind, did, on the 18th July, 1881, make and execute his last will and testament. Under the above circumstances it was left to the Court to decide which of the wills, in this allegation, was the last one, or whether the testator died intestate.

The following were the issues:—Firstly, whether the document bearing the date the 18th July, 1881, propounded by the plaintiffs, is or was at the date the last will of the deceased? Secondly, whether the testator, at the time of signing the document dated 18th July, 1881, was of sound mind and capable of making a will? Thirdly, whether the document referred to above, dated 18th July, 1881, was obtained by undue influence or coercion?

The case was commenced on Monday morning.

Mr. Owen expressed his determination to call the attesting witnesses to prove the execution of the will propounded, and to throw the onus upon the defendants of proving that it was invalid.

His HONOR warned the learned counsel that he ran a great risk of having his rebutting evidence shut out.

Mr. Owen contended that the Full Court had upheld the course he now proposed to take, when the question was raised some time ago. The same course had been taken by the late Mr. Butler and Mr. Darley when leading.

Mr. Salomons endeavoured to show that the report of the case upon which Mr. Owen relied was conclusively against the course that learned gentleman proposed to follow.

His HONOR said his general impression was that the issues involving the soundness of the will lay with the parties propounding it.

Mr. Owen did not press the point, but proceeded to open the case. He stated, amongst other things, that if the defendants endeavoured to prove incapacity from the fact of the testator having left his daughters without provision, they would have to throw back, not only to the will propounded, but to those of 1880 and 1879, wherein the testator disposed of his property, omitting to mention his daughters.

The examination of the witnesses was then proceeded with.

Richard Dalton, a conveyancer of 21 years' standing in Singleton, deposed that he drew the will propounded; three or four days before the will was signed, he had, in accordance with a request from testator, waited upon him at his office in Singleton, and had taken down the alterations he desired to make in his will by pencil memoranda upon the old will of August 1, 1880; he read these through seriatim, and then went back to his office, where he prepared the will; after the will had been read over to him, some alterations were made; witness subsequently accompanied testator to the Court-house at Singleton, where the will was attested by Mr. Dunning, the clerk of petty sessions and himself; in cross-examination the witness said he had prepared seven or eight wills for Mr. Browne since 1872, but did not think he had ever prepared any before that. The learned counsel for the defendant then put a will into his hands, dated 1865, which he acknowledged was in his (witness's) writing. He was also sharply cross-examined on the fact that he had drawn up provisions in former wills, giving annuities of £100 each to two of the sons, who at the same time shared in the main property. He swore distinctly that he always read over all alterations to Mr. Browne.

William Dunning, Clerk of Petty Sessions, gave evidence to the fact that he had attested the will propounded, and had remarked to Mr. Browne that it was not the first time he had performed a similar service for him; he had known the testator since 1854, and conversed with him a few months before the execution of the will; when he executed the will he appeared to be perfectly sound in mind; he considered Mr. Browne was a shrewd business man, decisive in his manner, and not a man who would be easily influenced or led; he had noticed no change whatever in his manner up to the time of the execution of the will; he was able to go about in a buggy, and sometimes on foot; he had always considered Mr. Browne a very temperate man, and had found him most business-like and methodical in his conduct upon the Bench as a magistrate; he had spoken to witness about six months before the date of the will, and had said his health was good and he was not suffering from anything; before the execution of the will witness had called on testator at his house to get his signature to documents, and had found him well, especially as to his mental capacity. The witness having said that he was under the impression that a portion of the will was read over to Mr. Browne by Mr. Dalton before he signed it, the counsel for the defendant cross-examined him very closely as to his recollection of what took place. He admitted that he did not take any interest in what Dalton and Browne were saying, but at the same time he adhered to his statement that a conversation did take place between them. He admitted that he now knew nothing of the contents of the will.

Dr. Reed, of Singleton, deposed that he had been the deceased's medical adviser since 1879; he was only consulted about simple matters until March '79, when he complained of giddiness in the head which witness considered to arise from weak action of the heart; he improved under treatment till September, but on the 20th December the heart symptoms returned; in January, 1880, he had attended deceased for indigestion; from the 31st August witness was again daily in attendance, and on the 15th August congestion of the right lung, developed in consequence of cold, by the 10th September the congestion had gone down, and the patient was put under tonic treatment; on the 10th November symptoms of diarrhœa set in, and continued till dissolution, the cause of death being general debility from previous sickness, and the fact that he was an elderly person who was suffering from fatty degeneracy of the heart and diarrhœa; witness had never seen anything wrong with his mind, and up to within two days of his death he was competent to make his will; witness had had transactions with him in addition to their association as brother magistrates. In cross-examination, the witness said that he would not admit that where a man who had been well-conducted and respectable all his life became at the age of 70 loose in his habits and conversation, that that was a sign of failing intellect; it might be presumptive evidence, coupled with other symptoms, but was not conclusive; he did not hold that loose morals were proof of insanity.

Benjamin Richards, who had known him from 1848, and had done business with him, brought evidence to show his capacity for business in March, 1881, when he had delivered some cattle to him.

Alexander Munro, of Singleton, gave evidence of the same character; he had always found the deceased rather close and well able to look after his own; he said Browne had told him that Mr. M'Elhone on one occasion had called him a —— liar; he saw the deceased at Singleton Show, on the 18th or 19th August, when he seemed bodily and mentally well.

Dr. Reed, re-called, stated he had made a mistake in saying that Mr. Browne had taken to his bed on 31st July, it should be 15th August.

John Elliott, the solicitor for the plaintiffs, gave some formal evidence as to documents; he ascertained that Mr. Browne had been one of the magistrates who had presided at the Police Court in January or February, 1881, when a man called Bushman was committed to take his trial for brutally ill-using a boy; the testator was a very hale old man, and used to ride about on horseback up to July.

J. M. Brunker produced a quantity of correspondence which had passed between him and the testator, and gave evidence as to his intellectual capacity; he considered him one of the smartest men for managing his business as he ever came across.

William Bull, a resident of Singleton, also gave evidence as to the testator's mental clearness.

John George Harris, manager of the Bank of New South Wales, Singleton, gave evidence as to the deceased's transactions with the bank.

In cross-examination, Mr. Salomons endeavoured to elicit that the testator had £3000 to his credit in a Singleton bank, whilst he was paying interest on an overdraft in a Sydney bank.

The further hearing of the case was adjourned until this morning, at 10 o'clock.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—TUESDAY.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.—TUESDAY.

(Before Mr. District Court Judge JOSEPHSON.)

LENNON V. M'CAULEY AND ANOTHER.

Plaintiff sued the defendants, Charles M'Cauley and Francis Cunningham, executors of the will of Thomas George M'Cauley, deceased, for the value of work and labour done in nursing the deceased and his wife. The plaintiff was nonsuited, on the ground that the work having been done previous to the passing of the Married Women's Property Act, and plaintiff being a married woman, she could not sue in her own right. Mr. Bruce Smith, instructed by Mr. Carolan, appeared for plaintiff; and Mr. Gannon for defendant.

HILL V. GARDINER.

This was an action for trespass, and £30 damages were claimed. The plaintiff, William Hill, was tenant to the defendant, George Gardiner, in Albion-street, and there being rent due, the defendant instructed a bailiff to levy. For some time the bailiff was unable to effect an entrance into the house, and ultimately got inside by defendant stepping from the balcony of his own residence next door on to the balcony of plaintiff's house, entering plaintiff's house, and admitting the bailiff by the front door. Evidence was given to the effect that the defendant thought the premises had been vacated, and that he entered the house as he did in order to see that everything was all right. A verdict was given for plaintiff, damages £20, and costs of witnesses. Mr. Tooce, instructed by Mr. M'Carthy, appeared for plaintiff; and Mr. Davis for defendant.

BUCHAN V. JOSEPHS.

Defendant did not appear, and a verdict for £13 2s. 6d., the amount claimed, was given for plaintiff.

REINHARD V. LAMAN.

This was an action with reference to a building contract, and in which the plaintiff claimed £19 10s. 3d., balance for work and labour done. Defendant had paid £3 2s. 6d. into Court, and with regard to the remaining portion of the amount claimed, pleaded "not indebted," chiefly upon the ground that the work had not been done according to plan and specifications. A verdict was given for plaintiff, for £3 7s. 9d. over and above the money paid into Court. Mr. Sly, instructed by Mr. G. J. Sly, appeared for plaintiff, and Mr. G. H. Reid, instructed by Mr. Faithful, for defendant.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—TUESDAY.

The sittings of the Central Criminal Court were resumed at Darlinghurst this morning before his Honor Mr. Judge Faucett. The Hon. E. Wisdom, Attorney-General, prosecuted for the Crown.

SENTENCES.

John Maher, Patrick Rowley, and Richard M'Namara, the young men who yesterday were found guilty of having assaulted Theresa Morris, and robbed her of £77, were brought up for sentence, when Maher stated that the £10 note in his possession had been given to him by a man who was a friend of his, and was not portion of the money he had said was taken from his brother's trousers at his sister's house. M'Namara told his Honor that Rowley was innocent of the charge.

His HONOR said that beyond doubt a most brutal attack had been made in this case upon an old woman who happened to be alone, the purpose being to obtain money, which the circumstances indicated would be probably spent in drink. The fourth man, he supposed, would never be convicted now, and although each of the prisoners had asserted his innocence, the facts against them were too strong, and the verdict, in his opinion, was right beyond doubt. He did not at the time it was told believe the story of Maher's brother and sister, that Maher had stolen a pair of trousers which contained money belonging to his brother, and he thought it was a pity that two such respectable-looking persons as Maher's sisters should enter the court, and, being sworn, tell the jury a story that was manifestly untrue. The statement made by Maher that morning that he obtained the £10 from a friend of his, was an additional proof that the account given by the sister and brother was not correct. With regard to M'Namara's statement, that Rowley was innocent of the charge, he could say nothing now, for the jury had found him guilty, and no doubt he had been led into misfortune by being in company with the others. Several convictions for minor offences had been proved against the prisoners, and if they had been guilty of any crime similar in magnitude to the present one, he would make the sentence very severe. Indeed, the circumstances were such that he could not justly pass a light sentence, and the decision of the Court, therefore, would be that each of the prisoners be kept to five years' hard labour on the roads or other public works of the colony.

RAPE.

Alfred Robinson, a respectable-looking married man, about 23 years of age, was charged with having, at Redfern, on July 10, committed the above offence upon a young married woman named Mary Irons. Mr. H. M'Culloch, instructed by Mr. G. G. Eid, appeared for the defence.

According to the evidence for the Crown, prisoner was a stranger to the prosecutrix, but on the day named her husband took him to their home, in Stirling-street. Prosecutrix's husband left the house for a brief period, and went to an hotel, and she alleged that, while he was away, prisoner committed the offence. She also stated that he had used violence towards her by placing a hand over her mouth, and holding her hands behind her back, and Dr. Egan proved that after the alleged occurrence she had marks of violence upon her body. Mrs. Lizzie Dean, a neighbour, deposed that she entered the house suddenly, and heard a noise up stairs as of a person being suffocated; and a portion of prosecutrix's dress, which was alleged to have been torn during her struggle with the prisoner, was produced. The defence was that prosecutrix was a consenting party, and that her dress was torn, and her body was marked during quarrels with her husband. Evidence that prisoner bore a good character, was also given. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and he was discharged.

METROPOLITAN QUARTER SESSIONS.

TUESDAY.

The Court was resumed at 10 o'clock this morning, before Mr. District Court Judge Forbes. Mr. P. J. Healey prosecuted for the Crown.

CHARGES OF LARCENY.

William Hutchinson was charged with having, at Newtown, on the 17th May, stolen a quantity of furniture, value £20, the property of one Frederick Sewell. The articles in question were removed from the residence of the prosecutor, Newman-street, Newtown, to No. 5, York-terrace, King-street, in the same municipality: the goods being conveyed thither by a vanman who was engaged by the prisoner, but was paid by Mrs. Sewell. The prisoner and Mrs. Sewell were present when the goods were taken from the house in Newman-street, and prisoner assisted in effecting their removal. The tenancy of the house in York-terrace was secured by the prisoner, who paid the landlady (Mrs. Grace James) some rent in advance, and in reply to a question told her that he had a wife and child, who were to occupy the house. The furniture was removed to the house on the 17th of May, and Mrs. Sewell with her child went to reside there on that day. Next morning Mrs. James, she deposed, saw the prisoner come out of the house; he came into her (Mrs. James's) shop and asked her to go and see his wife, who, he said, was lonely. The defence was that the prisoner was simply acting in accordance with the request of Mrs. Sewell, who had left her husband on account of his drunken habits, ill-treatment by him, and because he had told her to "clear out of the house." Mrs. Sewell gave evidence in support of this defence, and deposed that she gave the prisoner the money to pay the rent of the house with. His Honor having explained the law bearing on the case, said that if the jury came to the conclusion that the wife of the prosecutor and the prisoner had committed adultery before leaving the house in Newman-street, and that they had effected the removal of the goods to York-terrace in order that they might continue to live in adultery, it was competent for the jury to find the prisoner guilty. The jury found the prisoner not guilty, and he was discharged.

John Golding and William M'Kenna were charged with having at Sydney on the 29th July, stolen 20 bags of potatoes, the property of Mr. W. F. Martin. The prisoners were defended by Mr. Levien. The potatoes formed part of a consignment to Mr. Martin by the Waipa (s.), from New Zealand. The potatoes had been delivered on the wharf, and had been sold to Messrs. John M'Minn and Co., but that firm had not taken delivery of them. Messrs. M'Minn and Co. had another large quantity of potatoes on the same wharf. A Mr. Vaughan had purchased a quantity of potatoes from Messrs. M'Minn and Co. The purchaser employed a carter named James Carroll to deliver the potatoes; and Carroll deposed that he authorized the prisoners (who were in his employment) to go down to the wharf and take two loads (26 bags) of potatoes to be delivered at Vaughan's. Carroll gave one of the prisoners an order from Messrs. M'Minn and Co. to receive 13 bags of potatoes, and told the other prisoner to state to whomsoever might be in charge of the potatoes, that his employer wanted two loads, but had forgotten to get the second order. After the prisoners had taken possession of the potatoes a police constable went to them and one of the men then produced the order for one load (13 bags). Mr. Carroll stated that it was not unusual for persons to take delivery of goods which had been discharged on the wharf without giving up orders for the receipt of such goods, and that he had adopted that course on a number of occasions when he had found goods without anyone in charge of them. The jury found the prisoners not guilty, but added an expression of opinion to their verdict to the effect that they considered Carroll was to blame for his conduct in that matter.

James Cuthie was charged with having at Sydney, on the 22nd June, stolen one iron wheel, one pin, one "check," and some other pieces of iron, being portions of an iron crane, and the property of Mr. Robert Saunders. On a second count the prisoner was charged with having received the articles, well knowing them to have been stolen. The Crown Prosecutor explained that, practically, the charge was that of receiving stolen property. The prisoner was defended by Mr. D. Buchanan. The prosecutor is the proprietor of Saunders' wharf, at Pyrmont, and the portions of the crane enumerated in the information had been left on that wharf, and were worth between £35 and £40. The prisoner is a dealer in iron, and carries on business at the corner of Bremner and Harvey streets, Pyrmont. Two men named Ephraim and Lyne were arrested on a charge of stealing portions of the crane, and after they had been committed for trial the prisoner sent his man with some pieces of the iron in question to the prosecutor. A search warrant was executed shortly afterwards, and some other portions of the crane were found in the prisoner's yard. Most of the iron castings had been broken since they were removed from the wharf, so that they were now worth only about £3 as old iron. The defence was that the prisoner's yard was open to anyone, and that the two men named Lyne and Ephraim (now serving a sentence for larceny) had during the absence of the prisoner ta

H.M.S. NELSON.

The Nelson (guard) steamer has been expected at Sydney since Friday evening last, and the local naval authorities here are somewhat concerned at her non-appearance. Bad, remembering that the speed of the Nelson, working with full steam up all the way, would not exceed that of a mailboat, the date of her expected arrival should have been calculated at to-day or to-morrow, inasmuch as she only left the bay at Hobart, after coaling, on Tuesday afternoon. Although the last advices in respect of any of her class being despatched off to Europe, the Commodore has no cause for hurry, and he may be working the vessel a greater portion of the distance under canvas. Yet the feeling of anxiety throughout the ship to know the latest developments from home subsequent to the bombardment of Alexandria must be intense; so this Commodore Erskine may perhaps find an earnest to any man to arrive at his destination, if only for the purpose of being close to the line of cable communication. Whatever she derives her terrible appliances of war should form objects for intense interest and scrutiny on visiting days.

A SMART RUN.

The Union Steamship Company of New Zealand have cause to feel gratified upon the excellence of their new steamship, the Rimutaka. A cable message was received by the agents in Sydney yesterday to the effect that the Rimutaka arrived at Auckland on the previous day, having completed the voyage from Sydney in three days and eighteen hours.

In the Import markets the stagnant condition of trade reported for some time past continues. Sales in most lines are only on a limited scale. Country orders are restricted, consequent on the difficulties of carriage, which have for so long operated to prevent the deliveries of goods in the far west and north-western parts of the interior. Breadstuffs met with but a limited trade demand, at from £15 to £15 5s. for New South Wales, £14 10s. to £14 15s. for South Australian country brands, and £15 to £15 10s. town brands; Victorian, £14 10s. to £15 10s. Wheat scarce, and higher prices likely to rule. Coffee has only moderate trade inquiry on the basis of 82d. for No. 1 Ceylon Plantation. A line of Barry's chicory was quitted at 2½d. In rice, a steady trade noted at late values. In brewers' goods, malt cannot be quoted at over 7s. 3d. to 7s. 6d., for good samples of English. The recent purchase of all prime Kent and Tasmanian hops by one or two buyers has strengthened the market; considerable sales for shipment to Adelaide have been made at prices which have not transpired. Holders of Tasmanians ask to 2s. 3d. English advices report the hop gardens of Kent so infected with vermin as to materially affect production unless they cleared off very shortly. With good weather half a crop was looked for, but otherwise nothing approaching so large a yield could be anticipated. Mr. Bruce Tate states that owing to this critical state of the plant, combined with such a shortness of stocks as had been unknown for very many years, the market had advanced in price; and those holders who in April last were unable to make sales at 15s. to 20s. cwt. lose, had been selling out at a fair profit, the lower grades exhibiting the greater rebound. Foreign markets were much in sympathy with the English, and for some time past had been gradually moving upward. Imports in the United Kingdom showed a material diminution as compared with the return of the last two years, whilst stocks of new in warehouses were nil. In liquors, considerable sale of Bull Dog ale, to arrive, are noted, there being no stock on the spot. Some business noted in port wines at current values. Lowndes' rum inquired for; 4s. 3d. is the market quotation. In second class brandies, a good line of Bisquit Dubouche's was quitted for the country at a slight concession on current quotations. In metals, galvanized iron still moving at late rates. One or two cheap lines of fencing wire have been offering. Values continue depressed, owing to the high charges for carriage. The tenor of English advices is decidedly favourable to holders of metals. Scotch pig iron having advanced 2s. per ton, metals generally being firmer. The demand for galvanized iron was exceedingly brisk; prices had advanced 20s. per ton, and were expected to go higher. Tin plates had stiffened 6d. per box during the month. In our market business is noted in cement, a good line of K.B.S. having been placed at 10s. 3d. On the wharfs lucerne hay of various qualities is selling at from £4 10s. to £8 per ton; maize, 4s. 11d. per bushel; best feed oats, 3s. 4d. to 3s. 6d.; inferior to good, 2s. 9d. to 3s. 2d.; bran, 1s. 5d.; pollard, 1s. 4d.; onions, £4 15s. to £5 per ton; potatoes, New Zealand, £3 10s. to £3 15s.; Tasmanian, £1 5s.; Circular Head, £1 10s.; best Victorian hay chaff, £7 to £7 10s. per ton; straw chaff, £4 15s. to £5; butter, best fresh N. S. W., 2s. 6d. per lb.; eggs, 1s. per dozen; cheese, 8d. to 9d. per lb.; bacon, 6d. to 8d. per lb.; wax, 9d. to 11d.; fowls, 3s. to 4s. per pair; ducks, 4s. to 4s. 6d.; geese, 5s. to 8s.; turkeys, 7s. to 12s.; millet brooms, 8s. to 11s. per dozen.

Messrs. Fraser and Co. this morning sold by auction the barque Pride of England, 1351 tons, for the sum of £1600, Captain Punch being the purchaser. They will offer at auction to-morrow (Wednesday) morning colonial sugar, coarse salt, &c.; and in the afternoon, shipments of timber.

At the leather sales to-day there was a good demand for harness, at improved rates; other descriptions unaltered. Messrs. John Bridge, F. L. Barker, Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Mort and Co., and Maiden, Hill, and Clark cleared catalogues at the following prices:—Kip, 10d. to 15d.; sole, 8d. to 10d.; damaged sole, from 6d.; calf, 23½d. to 27d.; yearling, 20d. to 24d.; tweed, 12½d. to 26d.; harness, 11½d. to 14d.; kangaroo—N. S. W. 18d. to 21d., Hobart 8s. 9d. to 4s. 8d.; bag, 8s. 6d. to 12s.; bridle, 7s. 6d. to 12s.; basils, 6s. to 13s.

Our English commercial files by the P. and O. Co.'s steamship Rome are to the 30th June. Mr. W. Westgarth, in reporting on the negotiation of the New South Wales loan, said that the comparative cheapness of the Cape of Good Hope loan of £3,000,000 offered at the low minimum of 94 immediately attracted the attention of the leading brokers and dealers in the colonial market, and many intending applicants for the New South Wales loan at once announced their intention of transferring their favour to the Cape of Good Hope; and this proceeding threw a damp over the prospects of the New South Wales loan, some parties even anticipating that the loan possibly might not be all taken. Almost the moment, however, that the tenders were opened this view was dispersed, as it turned out that a tender from one individual establishment was for the whole advertised amount of £2,000,000, and some other applications brought the total up to £4,206,300. Much of the stock passed into the hands of banks and other influential institutions connected with the colonies. The price of the loan soon rose to 102½, but had since, in the face of the Egyptian difficulty, receded to about the issue price. Prices of colonial stocks had given way more or less all round, chiefly owing to the serious aspect of Egyptian affairs. The selling of the colonial securities at the reduced figures had been but small; none of the large holders appeared inclined to turn sellers at the reduced value. Closing quotations of banks' stocks were:—New South Wales, 63-65; Australasia, 80-82; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 25-26; London Chartered, 21½-22½; New Zealand, 26-27; Oriental, 15-16; Queensland National, 9½-10; Union of Australia, 63½-64½. A report of the wool market will be found elsewhere. From Messrs. Calverwell, Brooks, and Cotton's circular we learn that there had been a steady, and at times a strong, demand for tallow during the month, nearly 5000 casks having been sold under the hammer, and a few hundred casks privately. Prices had touched 45s. for mutton, and 45s. 6d. for beef, but at auction on the 23rd June, there was some depression, and lower rates were then, and subsequently accepted, 42 system is opposed by Sir JOHN HALL, the late Premier, and lately leader of the men who constitute the present Ministry.

The bill provides that rural lands, proclaimed by the Governor in Council for the purpose, shall be leased by Waste Land Boards under leases of 21 years, with perpetual right of renewal, subject to resumption for public purposes with compensation for improvements. The first leases are to be sold by tender with an upset rent of 5 per cent. on the capital value of the land, not being less than the statutory cash price. When two or more tenderers offer the same rent, the lease will be awarded by lot. To ensure actual settlement, no person taking a lease will be permitted to become in any way the owner, tenant, or occupier of more than 640 acres throughout the colony, except where leases are acquired by marriage or bequest. Rents will be payable half-yearly in advance. The consent of the Board will be required prior to any dealings with leases; and, with such consent, leases may at any time be thrown up. Occupation and improvement conditions are imposed. The renewal rent is to be 5 per cent. on the difference between the value of the improvements and the value of the land and improvements together, the State thus securing a return upon the increment of value unearned by the lessee. If the lessee decline renewal, the lease will be put up to public tender. Other clauses of the bill enable settlers who have taken up land under the system of deferred payments to bring it under the leasehold provisions, by surrendering their right to purchase, and having the rent fixed at 5 per cent. on the price at which they bought their land. The leases will date back to the time of purchase, but the past payments of purchase money will be credited as rent, so as to lighten the pressure upon the lessee to the extent that they have been in excess of the rate of rent charged. Thus for every year the purchaser has paid 10 per cent. on the amount of the purchase money he will be credited with the payment of two years' rent under the leasehold, and he will become rent free for a proportionate time after effecting the change of tenure. Other provisions deal with the pastoral leases. The term is to be extended to 14 years, but pre-emptive right is to be abolished, except as to 80 acres around a homestead.

In introducing this scheme, the Government does not pretend to put forth a general project for the nationalisation of the land, but the declared aim is to provide a new mode of dealing with the land and promoting settlement side by side with the others already in operation. It is true that the general power to bring lands under the leasehold system by proclamation would enable the Government to extend the experiment over all the agricultural land of the colony. But it is not the avowed intention of the Government to do this, and, as already shown, there are provisions in the bill which recognize the continuance of systems of sale. The question, however, is not merely what the present Government might do, but what might be the policy of future Governments, and it seems likely that at least an attempt will be made in committee to circumscribe the power of proclamation before referred to. This is a point upon which great stress ought to be laid. It is one thing to introduce the leasing system, as an experiment, within safe limits. It is another to make it supersede systems of alienation throughout the country. The Minister professes to be acting in only a tentative manner; but at the same time he admits that he is influenced by a regard to the theories of those who are attacking the principle of private property in land. His successor, having indefinite powers at command, might be a thorough convert to those theories, and, put them in force in a wholesale manner; but that certainly ought not to be done without a clear understanding on the part both of Parliament and people.

The argument chiefly relied upon by supporters of the bill was that the leasehold settler would not be required to lock up his capital in the purchase of land, but would have it ready for use in cultivation and making improvements. And when it is pointed out that the man who buys his land could obtain funds by mortgaging it, which the leaseholder would be unable to do under the system now proposed, the answer is that it is better to have the settler a tenant of the State than a tenant of the money-lender. This, however, does not meet the case of men who want to settle upon the land without capital; but passing by that consideration, it may be remarked that the political danger of covering the land with State tenants, where popular government prevails, supplies one of the strongest objections to the general adoption of the system. It may be safe, or even desirable, to test by experiment within well-defined limits, the force of other objections. Such experiments would show whether a leasehold tenure, even with perpetual right of renewal, would be as great a stimulus to industry and thrift as the actual or prospective possession of a freehold is known to be. They might show whether men of the British stock who have left their own country, where the acquisition of land was impossible, would be content with anything less than the freehold, and whether the offer of leasehold facilities would be a sufficient inducement to promote immigration. But it would be a hazardous thing to try whether the adoption of a leasehold tenure would corrupt and disorganize the politics of the country by making the change on so large a scale as possibly to produce the corruption and disorganization which are apprehended. It is useless to consider this aspects of the question in the light of what has been done in other countries where the government is not in the hands of the people. There the State and the State's tenantry stand apart, and their transactions may be conducted on principles corresponding with those which regulate transactions between private landlords and their tenants. Where the government is in the hands of the people, the tenants of the State are in a certain sense their own landlords, and they are certain to use what power they possess as landlords in regulating the terms of their tenure in their own interest. The perpetual right of renewal means in this case the perpetual right of interference with the conditions of renewal, and a perpetual tendency to weld together the occupants of the land into a compact body, ever ready to seize the balance of power and ally itself with this party or with that for the purpose of relaxing the tenants' terms. Our own free selectors, under the Act of 1861, have a kind of perpetual tenure with conditions; but, though their conditions are more favourable than those of leaseholders under the New Zealand bill would be, an agitation has already been raised in their name, and their agents have been sent into Parliament to procure a relaxation of conditions. The demand of the State for interest has been denounced as immoral. If the same men were perpetual leaseholders, without a right of purchase, would they not say that their condition was one of cruel serfdom, and when they became numerous and strong enough, abolish their own rent?

While we hope to see agriculture in this colony greatly extended, we have very good reason to doubt the soundness of the views of the political economist who declares that it is not such a good thing for the community that the land should be grazed at a large profit as that it should be tilled at a small one. It is said an acre will grow a sheep, and a sheep is worth 5s., of which 4s. is profit to the grazier. An acre yields 15 bushels of corn worth 67s. 6d., but the expenses are 45s., and only 2s. 6d. is profit to the grower. By those figures a speaker at the recent land meeting thought he had shown that there "might be cases where the instincts of capital to make the biggest profit might not be so good to the community as common sense." The argument is that more people are employed to cultivate than to graze an acre of land, the employment of people being the benefit to be derived. But it seems to be forgotten that we have not the people to employ. Our population is limited, and that part of it which occupies the land prefers to get 4s. an acre profit than 2s. 6d. In a free country people must be allowed to use their land as they choose; and they are better judges of what is for their advantage than theorists, who wish to disturb the operation of natural laws by inharmonious artificial regulations. When we have a large unemployed or unprofitably employed population anxious and willing to take up and till land on terms which will be more advantageous to themselves and to capitalists than could be obtained by them in grazing pursuits, then agriculture will flourish. That time will come. In the meantime our handful of colonists are certainly doing better for themselves and the country by making 4s. an acre profit out of, say 200,000,000 acres grazed, than they could do by working 4,000,000 acres, to which their operations would necessarily be restricted in tilling the soil at a profit of 2s. 6d. per acre. They are able to graze the whole of the territory; they could not till one-fiftieth part of it. If the profit per acre is as stated, then the colony clears £40,000,000 annually from pastoral pursuits, whereas it would only be possible to make £1,000,000 by agriculture. The appeal to common sense puts the appellant to confusion even on his own figures. Moreover, grazing improves while agriculture exhausts the soil, so that those who are now in the infancy of the colony engaged in growing sheep and cattle are preparing the ground for the more successful pursuit of agriculture in the future.

When Mr. BENT told the deputation from the Melbourne Chamber of Commerce that he was "prepared to fight New South Wales in the matter of railway fares," we ventured to suggest that before he declared war he would do well to make himself acquainted with the facts. He has done so, and the consequence is that all his jingoism has vanished. He has made the discovery that he cannot force the trade, do what he will, and that if he could get it its cost would be more than its value. To go down to two shillings a bale, as he was asked to do, would be to carry at a loss. Nor would that be all. He would create discontent amongst his regular customers. Sir JOHN O'SHANASSY asked, "Why should I pay seven shillings a bale from Echuca if the squatter from Hay is to get his bales carried at two shillings?" It is a common enough result of protection to serve the foreigner better than the home customer; but when the Government does it on a large scale, and publishes the transaction far and wide, the less favoured customers cannot be expected to sit still. Mr. BENT finds that he will lose seven or eight thousand pounds by the diversion of wool to Sydney, and he has come to the conclusion that the first loss will be the least. Any attempt to snatch this business out of Mr. GOODCHAP'S hands will only result in his burning his fingers. So he has concluded to accept the inevitable. The war of railway tariffs, therefore, is not to come off. This is a rational decision, and may be the beginning of improved relations.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE resolute attitude of the British Government has been sufficient to induce the Sultan to change his mind in regard to the intended destination of the troops despatched from Constantinople. Instead of going to Egypt they are only to go to Crete. A later message states that the Porte has made a final and definite promise to proclaim Arabi a rebel. Sir Charles Dilke stated in the House of Commons on Monday evening that the Conference at Constantinople had no control whatever over the military action of Great Britain in guarding and defending the Suez Canal: and in regard to the proposal of the Italian Government for a collective naval protection of the waterway, the English Government has telegraphed to Earl Dufferin that it can only give its assent to the proposal on the understanding that such protection shall be of a temporary character. It declines to give an unqualified assent to the proposal.

THE Ministerial crisis which appeared imminent, in consequence of the obstinate attitude of the House of Lords in regard to its amendments in the Arrears of Rent Bill, seems likely to be averted. It is stated that the Marquis of Salisbury, the Conservative leader, is likely to propose a compromise.

A NEW French Ministry has been formed by M. Duclerc, a member of the Senate. One of our cablegrams contains the names of the new Ministers and the portfolios which have been respectively allotted to them.

THE Australian cricketers commenced a match at Canterbury against an eleven of Kent on Monday. Having won the toss, the Australians went to the wickets, Bannerman and Massie being the first to face the bowling of Hearne and Wotton. They made a long stand, and scored rapidly, the former making 47, and the latter 54, Blackham, however, coming out as the most brilliant batsmen on this occasion with a total of 62. All the team played in fine style, and it was not until the Australians had put together 307 that the innings closed. Six of the home team had been disposed of for 84 when the stumps were drawn.

THE English mails by the P. and O. Company's steamship Rome, via Suez, were delivered from the General Post Office yesterday. The latest London date is June 30. The resume of the Egyptian question given in the letter of our London correspondent—to be found elsewhere—must be read in the light of the time when it was written, as the situation has to some extent altered. The French alliance is shown in the official correspondence lately published to have been a great difficulty in the hands of the British Government, and the opinion is expressed that should the Powers agree upon selecting a mandataire, the choice would fall upon England, and all the more so if she were not combined with France. Even Prince Bismarck, it is said, opposed the alliance only on the ground that he believed a joint occupation by France and England would lead to a "fall out." The attitude assumed by the Tories in this crisis has not advanced the position of the party, or reflected much credit on the leaders. Our correspondent puts the Government position thus:—"It had to encounter the tergiversation of a supposed ally, the double-dealing of Austria, Germany, Italy, and Russia, who have been playing their 'own little game,' and the vacillation of Turkey." That "extraordinary member of Parliament," Mr. A. M. Kavanagh—who has neither arms nor legs—is organizing the Irish Land Corporation, with a view to prevent boycotting.

IN the Supreme Court, yesterday, a rule nisi for a new trial was refused in Lucas v. the Minister of Works, one of the Darling Harbour compensation cases. In Lee and another v. Castner, District Court appeal, a new trial was granted. In re Attwell v. Lucas, the Court gave an important decision on the Licensing Act, which will be fully reported in a future issue. His Honor the Primary Judge disposed of a number of formal matters in Equity. The important will suit of Browne and others v. M'Rhose and others was again proceeded with in the Jury Court before his Honor Sir George Innes and a special jury of twelve. The evidence taken was of a painful character, the cross-examination by the defendant's counsel being conducted without reserve. The case will be resumed at 10 a.m. to-day.

THE annual report of Mr. Harrie Wood, Under-Secretary for Mines, has been issued from the Government Printing Office. The reports from the wardens and other officers in the country districts for the year 1881 are upon the whole most satisfactory, notwithstanding the severe drought which during a great part of the year paralysed the enterprise that, under more favourable circumstances, would have led to a very marked improvement in nearly every branch of mining. The results of the mining operations in 1881 show an increase of £305,317 over the aggregate value of the output of minerals for 1880, as the following figures will show:—Gold raised in 1881, 149,027oz., valued at £566,513, an increase of 31,063oz., valued at £121,969; silver, 57,254oz., of the value of £15,026, showing a decrease to the extent of £852. The amount of coal raised in 1881 was 1,775,324 tons, valued at £608,428; this was an increase on the output of 1880 of 309,044 tons, but the value of the mineral was estimated at £12,088 less than the value of the 1880 output. 27,894 tons of shale were raised of the value of £40,748; in quantity there was an increase over the previous year of 8093 tons, but a decrease in the value to the extent of £3976. 8200 tons of tin were raised of the value of £724,003, an increase of 2041 tons of the value of £232,666. The output of copper in 1881 was 5493 tons, of the value of £355,062, an increase over the 1880 output of 99 tons, but a decrease in value to the extent of £8997. The quantity of iron produced in 1881 was 6560 tons, of the value of £17,871, an increase in quantity of 4288 tons, and in value of £32,536. Of antimony 539 tons were raised, of the value of £17,340, an increase in quantity of 439 tons, and in value of £15,694. The quantity of lead raised was 52 tons, of the value of £1625, an increase over 1880 of 25 tons, and an increase in value of £735. 12 tons of asbestos were raised in 1880, of the value of £323, but none was raised last year. In the 1880 returns bismuth does not figure; last year 12 tons were raised, of the value of £2728. Mixed minerals are set down at 154 tons, of the value of £1020. The aggregate value of the minerals in 1881 exceeds that of any year since 1875, and exceeds the decennial average by £44,816.

THE opening of the Glebe tramway, as previously announced, will take place on the 15th instant (Tuesday next). For a short time, it appears, owing to a deficiency of rolling stock, the department will not be able to run the trams so frequently as might be desired, and the time-table which will come into force at the opening of the line will be only a temporary one. Additional motors, &c., have, however, lately arrived, and no time will be lost in getting them to work, so as to give the inhabitants of the Glebe and its environs as full a service as the other suburbs enjoy.

WE understand that a scheme has been propounded, which, if it can be carried out, will be the means of supplying the whole of the North Shore district with water. The idea is to dam the head of the Lane Cove River, and to pump the water into a reservoir to be constructed on some adjacent high ground, so that the water may flow by gravitation to all the centres of population on the north side of the harbour. The scheme has been brought under the notice of the Government, and a survey with a view to test its practicability is being made under the direction of the Department of Harbours and Rivers.

THE Joint Board, consisting of the Senate of the University and the directors of the Prince Alfred Hospital, delegated to make the appointments to the medical and surgical positions in the hospital, have resolved upon the following:—Two honorary physicians: Mr. Thomas Chambers, M.R.C.S. Eng., F.R.C.S. Edin.; and Mr. Alfred Shewen, M.D., London. Two honorary surgeons: Mr. G. Fortescue, M.R.C.S. Eng., M.B., London; and Mr. W. H. Goode, M.B. and M.Ch., Dublin. One honorary ophthalmic surgeon: Mr. Thos. Evans, M.R.C.S. Eng., L.S.A. London. Two junior honorary physicians: Mr. G. Hurst, M.B. and M.Ch. Edin., M.B. London; and Mr. A. M. Oram, M.D., Edin. and Sydney. Two junior honorary surgeons: Mr. G. T. Hankins, M.R.C.S. Eng. L.S.A. London; and Mr. G. E. Twynam, M.R.C.S. Eng., L.R.C.P. London. The appointments to the positions of resident medical superintendent and assistant medical officer were postponed until Monday next.

IT is gratifying to learn by the Suez mail of the brilliant success of another of our Sydney graduates who has just taken the degree of Doctor of Science at London University. Mr. E. H. Rennie, after five years' hard study at London, has taken this degree, which is considered the highest honour to be attained in the scientific world. Candidates for this degree have to furnish evidence of having done some original work in one of the sciences, besides passing a very stiff examination in theoretical and practical work also. On the last occasion there were six candidates, all of whom chose to be examined in Chemistry, but only two passed. There were four very hard papers on Theoretical Chemistry, after doing which, the candidates had to analyze mixtures containing acetate of uranium with titanic acid, and methylic acetate with ethylic formate. Mr. Rennie's valuable papers on the "Acids of our native Currant," and the "Medicinal Principle of our Sarsaparilla," which have been read before the Royal Society, were highly valued at this examination, and no doubt largely contributed to his success. After a very successful career at the Sydney University, Mr. Rennie took his B.A. with the gold medal for Science and honours in Mathematics; a few years afterwards he took his M.A. with the gold medal for Science; he then taught for several years in the Brisbane Grammar School, which he helped on considerably towards its present high position; after which he proceeded to the London School of Mines, where he took the degree of B.Sc. two years ago, and finally the degree of D.Sc. last month. Dr. Rennie is to be congratulated on being the first colonial candidate who has taken this honourable degree; and it is to be hoped that he will soon find a sphere of usefulness in his native land, in which he will be able to exercise his exceptional talents and acquirements in science.

SOME samples of very low tea have been brought under our notice. They are evidently mixed with foreign ingredients to an extent which almost disentitle them to the name. It is said that one of the samples was taken from several chests recently submitted at a public auction mart in this city, though it is satisfactory to learn that no one would make an offer beyond 1d. per lb. for it. Whether it has since been sold and gone into consumption does not appear. The other sample, it is said, is part of a considerable line now under offer to the trade. Those who are concerned should therefore be on their guard. In Melbourne forfeitures and convictions have taken place owing to the attempted sale of poisoned teas. There has been no public exposure of frauds of the kind in this market. But in the face of the samples now under offer, we may doubt whether this is not due to the lack of vigilance in carrying into effect the provisions of our laws against adulteration rather than to there being no good cause for it.

THE Metropolitan meeting of the New South Wales Coursing Club was commenced yesterday, at Rooty Hill, and so far has passed off very successfully. The weather was fine, there was an average attendance, and the sport was excellent. The meeting will be continued and concluded to-day.

THE sittings of the Central Criminal Court were resumed at Darlinghurst yesterday. The three young men convicted on Monday of having violently assaulted Theresa Morris, and stolen £77 from her, were brought up for sentence. His Honor Mr. Justice Faucett, having expressed his opinion that their crime was of the most brutal nature, and that their purpose was to obtain money which the circumstances indicated would probably be spent in drink, sentenced each of them to five years' hard labour on the roads or other public works of the colony. Alfred Robinson, a respectable-looking married man, about 23 years of age, was charged with having violated a young married woman named Mary Irons at Redfern. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and he was discharged, after which the Court was adjourned until the following morning.

HENRY SOLOMON, of the Caxton Printing Office, Pitt-street, was fined at the Water Police Court yesterday for printing a pamphlet entitled "A Public Warning on Life Assurance, by Henry Francis," without imprinting thereon his (the printer's) name and address as the printer thereof. Mr. Salomons, Q.C., instructed by Stephen, Laurence, and Jaques, the solicitors for the Australian Mutual Provident Society, appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Pigott for the defence. Mr. Salomons, after a lengthy address (wherein he referred to the pamphlet as a gross libel, and quoted figures and reports to show the absurdity of its statements), intimated that although the fine amounted to £500, still, as the defendant had stated his intention of pleading guilty, and had published it in ignorance of the contents, he merely asked for a nominal fine. Mr. Pigott, on behalf of his client, pleaded guilty, and expressed regret, and stated the circumstances under which it was printed. The defendant was fined £3 exclusive of costs.

THREE charges of alleged larceny were dealt with at the Metropolitan Quarter Sessions yesterday, when all the accused—William Hutchinson, John Golding, William M'Kenna, and James Chalker—were acquitted.

YESTERDAY, at about 10 a.m., the body of a man named Joseph Rothery, aged 57 years, and residing at 137, Goulburn-street, was found hanging by the neck to a banister of the staircase in his house. He had only arrived in the colony from England about six months, and had, it is stated, been drinking heavily. He had lately said to his wife that he would commit suicide, and going out yesterday morning he returned unexpectedly, and shortly afterwards it was found he had taken his life. An inquest on the body will be held this morning.

JAMES COOKSEN, aged 31 years, a commercial traveller lodging in Moyse's Hotel, was yesterday taken to the hospital, suffering from a wound in the throat, inflicted, it is stated, by himself, whilst in a fit of temporary insanity. After the wound had been attended to he was sent to Darlinghurst Gaol.

A CORRESPONDENT writes on the subject of the "walk over the crossings" regulation. He states in regard to the Barrack-street crossing that the observance of this regulation is almost entirely neglected. "Daily experience," he writes, "has proved to me that vehicles and horsemen positively endanger the lives of people who attempt to cross the road at this junction on foot, and it is necessary to make a rush over, or run the risk of being driven or ridden down. This is the most frequented, and also the most neglectfully observed crossing in Sydney, and is particularly harrassing to women and children."

A CORRESPONDENT furnishes the following statistics of population respecting Egypt, which will doubtless be read with interest at the present juncture:—Alexandria, 220,000; Rosetta, 40 miles east of Alexandria, 15,000; Damietta, 28,000. These are the Mediterranean towns. Cairo, with 350,000; Tanta, with 40,000; and Zag-a-Zig, with 60,000, are the Delta towns. The Canal towns are Port Said, 9000; Ismailia, 3000; and Suez, 12,000. Alexandria, remarks our correspondent, is a wonderful proof of the growth of Egyptian trade since the days of the battle of the Nile, when it boasted of only 6000 inhabitants. The highest estimate of the Egyptian forces, active and reserve, places them at 80,000 men. Of this strength there are now fully two-thirds under arms. In the Soudan and Nubia there are about 8000 regular troops. The ordinary garrison of the Delta may be put down at about 8000 more, and Arabi has called out, in all, about 40,000 men. Of these about half are actually at Cairo and Alexandria. The remainder have been formed into a reserve, probably at Cairo.

THE following extraordinary case is recorded by the Bendigo Independent:—"A melancholy illustration of the influence of the emotions over the organs of the body occurred on Tuesday, August 1. A young man named Thomas Jason, aged about 25 years, at his residence, Golden-square, was standing by the bedside of his father, who was ill, and supposed to be dying, at about half-past 8 o'clock. After standing with him for some time he walked out into the plot attached to the house, and presently staggered in again, quite blind. On Wednesday morning he had, so far, failed to recover his sight. Till this occurrence he had never had any affection of the eyes, and, in fact, had enjoyed remarkably good eyesight."

A PARLIAMENTARY return (says the Pall Mall Gazette), has been issued, showing the financial position of the Irish Church Temporalities Commission, now represented by the Irish Land Commission. From this it appears that the present charge on the Irish Church Fund is £508,264, which will be increased to £515,204 when the full charge of interest on the Relief of Distress Loan comes into course of payment. On the other hand, the remaining Church charges, now stated at £29,000 a year, will gradually diminish. Elaborate tables are given to show what the future receipts and expenditure up to the year 1932 are likely to be, and it is stated that when the year 1919 is reached there will remain only the charges of management, the charge of public services now on the fund, and also of any further charges which may be imposed upon it, and the surplus will be available for paying off the National School Teachers' Fund, £1,500,000; the Intermediate Education Fund, £1,000,000; and the capital value of the annuity of £20,000 now payable to the Royal University, say £400,000; as also the capital of any further charges which may have been imposed upon the fund.

London Figaro has hit upon an ingenious expedient for effecting a journey round the world without any expense whatsoever to the traveller, which expedient it fervently recommends to enterprising but impecunious tourists for their adoption: The first thing the wanderer does is to become a Jew. Having pe formed this preliminary feat, he must contrive to effect a lodgment upon some portion of the Czar's territory. There he will be immediately expelled, and conveyed gratis to Lemberg, in Galicia. At Lemberg he will be received by Mr. Laurence Oliphant, who will forward him to the United States at the cost of the Jewish Relief Fund. Arrived in America, the traveller puts on the raiment and demeanour of a Chinese. He will then be conveyed to the Flowery Realm free of charge, by a philanthropic company, bent upon eliminating the Celestial element from the States. Immediately on being set ashore in a Chinese port he should give out that he is a born Russian, entrusted with a secret political mission and therefore travelling in disguise. The Chinese authorities will at once cause him to be transported to their north-western frontier, where they will hand him over to the Russians. These, as soon as they find that the stranger is a Jew, will pass him on to the capital of Austrian Poland; and when, for the second time, he arrives at Lemberg, he will have "put a girdle round about the earth" quite as inexpensively, if not altogether as expeditiously, as ever Puck did in his best days.

A CLERICAL revolt (says the Times of India) is threatened. "A chaplain[of 10 years' service writes to a Calcutta paper:—'Now that a bishop is being sent out for the diocese of Rangoon, surely it is opportune to discuss the question whether there is a diocese of Rangoon. This diocese of Rangoon has been created merely by letters patent. But English constitutional law expects an Act of Parliament as well as letters patent for the creation of new dioceses under the Crown. It seems to me the chaplains of Rangoon ought to bestir themselves. The present policy of Indian bishops appears to be to confer, not only the best plain chaplaincies, but the hill chaplaincies as well, on the most recent arrivals in India—on young clergymen fresh from the colleges, and destitute of service. This being so, it becomes a very grave question whether or not the whole of the bishops who pursue this policy really possess any legal authority over chaplains and chaplaincies, or any legal status of any kind at all. I confess I write as one with a grievance, but I know of many others who have like grievances, and it seems to me time to speak out."

SIR SAMUEL BAKER has written on the Egyptian question. In the concluding paragraph of his letter he says:—"It is premature to hazard an opinion upon the result of a European Conference; but it is clear to every practical mind that Egyptian administration must be organized and protected by certain Powers of Europe, to whom the right of control will be conferred by the collective decision of those who signed the Berlin Treaty. It is useless for England to prate concerning 'British interests' unless we are determined to uphold them when endangered; but the well-being of Egypt is so essential to the security of the route to our Indian possessions that free passage of the Suez Canal during peace or war must be absolutely maintained. Egypt must either become independent of Turkey by purchase, as already suggested, through the medium of a guarantee by England and France, or her position must be definitely and unmistakably determined under European control, to prevent the recurrence of political disturbances which result from intrigues at Constantinople. The first step will be the disappearance of Arabi Pasha, to be followed by a reduction in the army, and the establishment of a household brigade of well-selected troops commanded by Europeans, to ensure the security of the Khedive, and to prevent all future military demonstrations. A judicious thinning out of the great host of European officials might soften the prejudices of the Egyptian Notables, and a return to the status quo, with a Ministry under the guidance of Cherif Pasha, would at once establish confidence, and Egypt would regain the prosperous condition which was endangered by the disturbance of a puppet adventurer."

THE Band of the New South Wales Artillery will perform in the Botanic Gardens this afternoon (weather permitting) from 3.15 until 4.45, under the conductorship of Bandmaster E. R. Fennell. THE WAR IN EGYPT.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

LONDON, AUG. 7.

In the House of Commons, this afternoon, Sir Charles Dilke, the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, denied that there was any truth in the reports which have been current, that the British Government had sent an ultimatum to Turkey, in consequence of the refusal of the latter to proclaim Arabi Pasha a rebel, previous to the despatch of Turkish troops to Egypt.

In the course of his remarks this afternoon Sir Charles Dilke stated that the Conference of the Ambassadors at Constantinople had no control whatever over the military action of Great Britain in guarding and defending the Suez Canal.

AUG. 8.

In reply to the proposal of the Italian Government, that a collective naval protection of the Suez Canal by the great European Powers should be undertaken, the British Government has telegraphed to Earl Dufferin that they can only consent to the suggestion made by Italy on the distinct understanding that the collective protection of the Canal is to be of a temporary character only. They decline to give an unqualified assent to the proposal.

CONSTANTINOPLE, AUG. 7.

It is now announced that the destination of the Turkish troops, about to sail, has been changed by order of the Sultan, and they will now proceed to Crete, and not Egypt. This sudden change is believed to be due to the resolute attitude taken by the British Government in insisting on the proclamation of Arabi Pasha a rebel before the despatch of the troops.

After an interchange of numerous communications, during which the relations between the two powers have been a good deal strained, the Ottoman Porte to-day, in response to the urgent demands of Earl Dufferin, the British Ambassador, made a final and definite promise to proclaim Arabi a traitor. It is expected that the proclamation will shortly be issued.

THE AUSTRALIAN ELEVEN IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, AUG. 5.

The match between the Australian Eleven and the Gloucestershire team was continued and concluded to-day, when the home team resumed their innings, with five wickets down, and 212 to avert a one-innings defeat. Grace, the not-out man of yesterday, added 22 to his score, when he was given out leg before wicket at 77. The only other player who showed a good defence was Gilbert, who scored 21. The innings finally closed for 183. The Australians thus won the match in one innings, with 159 runs to spare. The weather was very fine during the day, and the attendance was large. The interest of the spectators was maintained almost to the close of the game. Subjoined is the scores:—

GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Second Innings.

Grace, l b w	77
Dr. Grace, bowled	18
Townsend, caught	18
Midwinter, caught	1
Moberley, caught	25
Pratt, caught	2

Australian Bowling Analysis.—Garrett took three wickets for 82 runs; Palmer four for 61.

AUG. 7.

A match was commenced to-day at Canterbury between the Australian cricketers and an eleven of Kent. The weather was very fine, and the attendance was large. The home team comprised the following:—C. P. Wilson, M. C. Kemp, W. H. Paterson, R. W. Foord, Lord Harris, R. S. Jones, F. A. M'Kinnon, E. F. S. Tylecote, Lipscombe, G. G. Hearne, and Wotton. The Australians, who won the toss, elected to go in. Bannerman and Massie were the first at the wickets, to the bowling of Hearne and Wotton. Both batsmen made a long stand, and scored rapidly. The former made 47, the latter 54. Murdoch, who followed, was stumped before he had scored. One feature of the innings was the splendid display of batting by Blackham, who scored 62, and who gave only one chance. Blackham played with great care, and was much applauded. Jones scored 59 by excellent cricket, and made some good hits. Boyle carried out his bat for 27. The wicket was lively, and suited the Australians, who all played well. The innings closed for 307. The home team commenced by sending in Paterson and Lord Harris. The former scored 19, the latter 17. Tylecote, with 28, not out, was the highest scorer on his side. The Australian bowling was, as usual, dead on the wicket, and the batsmen had difficulty in scoring off it. When the stumps were drawn six of the county wickets had fallen for 84 runs. The scores run:—

AUSTRALIANS.—First Innings.

Bannerman, stumped	47
Massie, caught	54

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

The harvest prospects throughout the north-eastern districts are very encouraging.

A nugget of 50oz. has been found at Castlemaine.

A stormy scene occurred in the Melbourne Presbytery this morning. The Rev. R. Scott, whilst addressing the Presbytery on a report submitted by the Church Extension Committee, stopped, on two or three occasions, to complain of certain members talking incessantly, instead of giving their attention to business. Finally, talking being still continued, he took the unusual course of naming the Revs. P. R. M. Wilson and J. Paton as the principal offenders. Mr. Wilson displayed much indignation, denied that he had interrupted the proceedings more than by only holding a whispered conversation with Mr. Paton, and added that if Mr. Scott wished to secure attention he should say something to the point. A very heated discussion ensued, but ultimately order was restored by the Rev. Mr. Wilson withdrawing his offensive remark.

A miner named Hirt, employed in a mine at Beaufort, has been committed for trial on a charge of stealing gold. The accused was detected in the act of secreting auriferous washdirt inside his shirt.

A mail boy named Brown fell down a siding a couple of days ago, whilst carrying mails from Wood's Point to Jamieson. It was found that he had his back broken. The deceased lad was the only support of aged parents.

The Austin Hospital, for incurables, will be opened on Monday next by the Mayor, the Governor being unable to perform the ceremony.

At the meeting of the committee of the Victoria Racing Club to-day, Captain Standish was elected chairman for the ensuing year.

The Police Commission have written to the Government, requesting an inquiry to be held into the charges made against Superintendent Winch and Sub-inspector Larner, of borrowing money from a publican. The Commission represent that the tenor of their report must depend to some extent upon the results of the charges made, some of the members being inclined to recommend that in re-organizing the police force a board consisting of three members be appointed to control it, and Mr. Winch, who is a senior officer, would probably be appointed one of these, if nothing be found to his discredit in connection with the present charge.

A large public meeting was held at the Temperance Hall this evening, at which resolutions in favour of the local option principle were adopted.

The Associated Banks have raised the rates of interest on deposits and discount as follows:—Interest for three, six, and 12 months' deposits, at the rate of 3, 4, and 5 per cent. respectively; the discount rates to be 6 per cent. for three months' drafts, 7 per cent. for over that period; and on overdrafts 8 per cent. to be charged.

The Tariff Commission took further evidence regarding the stock tax to-day. The Hon. Thos. Loader, managing director of the Apollo Candle Company, and two representatives of the most salesmen and wholesale butchers, gave evidence, all of whom were opposed to the tax.

The select committee of the Assembly to which the Tramway Bill was referred sat again to-day. Further evidence was taken. The preamble and the first three clauses were agreed to. Mr. Clapp, managing director of the Omnibus Company, said that an endless rope system had been patented here for his company, but if that system were adopted they ought to have a longer lease, as the cost of introducing it was £16,000 per mile.

A system of robbery, conducted under strange circumstances, has been brought to light. For many months past, Edward Duckett, an ironmonger and general importer, has been continually missing goods of different descriptions, chiefly ironmongery and red and white lead. The total value of the property so missing is estimated at £1000. The matter having been placed in the hands of a detective, to-day a quantity of the stolen goods, to the value of £20 was found on the premises of Michael Dookery, a tinsmith, in Elizabeth-street, who refused to state where he obtained them, and he was thereupon arrested. Two men, named Arthur Kershaw and Joseph Hoa, storekeepers, in the employ of Duckett, and a tinsmith named William Boyd, were arrested on a charge of carrying away the goods. Another of Duckett's employees, who, however, has not been arrested, states that he has been receiving from £1 10s. to £3 per week regularly from the two storekeepers named, as an inducement to keep silence regarding the robbery, he having seen the prisoners take the goods away.

In the Supreme Court to-day, J. F. Anderson, Superintendent of the Alfred Hospital, sued Messrs. Robertson, Wagner, and Co. for £2500 damages on account of the late Lillydale coach accident. The case had not concluded when the Court rose.

The Cabinet have under consideration a request from the Melbourne agent of the Belgian Export Company to allow that company an opportunity of tendering for the locomotives about to be ordered outside the colony.

Captain Legal has been nominated Warden of the Marine Board by the Underwriters' Association. The report of the association states that it has been ascertained that a fruitful source of damage to the cargo of steamers on the outward voyage is the quantity of steam generated in the hold when passing through the tropics.

At a meeting of the institute in reference to the death of Marshall Wood, a strong opinion was expressed that the statuses of Daphne and the Song of the Shirt, which were left here after the close of the Adelaide Exhibition, should be retained in the colony, and placed in the Art Gallery.

The City Council met in their new chamber for the first time to-day. During the meeting it was suggested that the bylaws should be amended, with a view of dealing with the perambulator nuisance.

It is reported that an important discovery of copper has been made five miles from Beltana, 1000 yards from the railway line.

The City Council, which has already accepted a tender for the erection of public baths, has received a communication from the Commissioner of Lands asking whether, in view of opposition, and the possibility of the site being required in connection with the new Parliament buildings, they will be prepared to reconsider the matter. The question was referred to a Committee of the Whole. It was mentioned during the debate that the Government might require to remove the Government printing office and baths to give a clear space to the new Parliament buildings to the Torrens River.

A blacksmith named Richard Matthews was found dead at the Forge Drainage Works, in the south east; one of his arms being burned off. Nothing is known as to the cause of the fatality.

It is stated that the crops in the south-east are seriously damaged by the continued wet.

WELLINGTON, TUESDAY.

Mr. Montgomery has given notice in the House of Representatives to move an amendment on the second reading of the Loan Bills,—"That this House disapproves of the loan proposals of the Government." The debate commences to-morrow. The result will probably close in favour of the Ministry.

THE GRAFTON BANK ROBBERY.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

GRAFTON, TUESDAY.

An application was made this afternoon to his Honor Judge Murray to admit to bail the two young men who are under committal for the robbery of the South Grafton Bank, which case is now to be tried in Sydney. The affidavit read in the case of the prisoner Wilcox stated that it was believed he was to be called as Queen's evidence; that the case would not be tried for some time; that he was suffering from a severe attack of influenza; that his health would be endangered by confinement; and that he would be prepared to give substantial bail. Evidence was given by witnesses of the prisoner's state of health. The Crown Prosecutor opposed the application, maintaining that the health of the prisoner was improving, and could not be affected by imprisonment for a short term; that no bill had yet been filed against either of the prisoners; that one stood in exactly the same position as the other; that without Wilcox's evidence there was no case against M'Bride; and that the Crown had no guarantee that if the accused were released they might not be got out of the way. They had only to wait about seven weeks for trial, and if was better that he should suffer some inconvenience rather than that the ends of justice be endangered. His Honor said that the only ground shown for granting bail was ill-health. It was not a usual practice to grant bail in cases of approvers who thus admitted their guilt, and who by their acts showed that they had changed their mind. If he did it this once it might be done again. In a warm climate, and in, like that of Grafton, a well-managed gaol, he did not think the prisoner's health could suffer. The temptation to get away was so great that, under the circumstances, he must refuse bail. A similar application was then made on the part of M'Bride. The affidavit set forth that the accused had retained counsel at great expense; and subpœned as a witness his father, who was a justice of the peace; that he was prepared to give substantial bail. Mr. O'Ryan, who made both applications, spoke in strong language of what he termed the irresponsible authority of the Attorney-General. Without questioning the legality of that official's action, he said that it was very unfair that a prisoner, whom he had allowed to make every preparation for defence at great expense, had been only notified of a change of venue at the last moment. He would ask his Honor not to follow up such unfair treatment by refusing bail, and said it was impossible for prisoner to get away if he were disposed. Counsel alluded to the fact of nearly the whole of the money alleged to be stolen being found. The Crown Prosecutor, in replying, designated counsel's speech as a hustings speech, and opposed the application. The Crown had not done what they did without good reasons, and the interest of the Crown was the interest of the public. He pointed out the temptation to prisoner, who was a young man, to get away even at a pecuniary sacrifice to his friends; and for the latter, also, to get him away. His Honor said that this case was different to the other. An approver he always looked upon with some degree of suspicion. The prisoner in this case had expended a large sum in defence, however, and would, as in all such cases, hope for acquittal. His Honor was disposed to grant bail, and did not believe that advantage would be taken of it. The prisoner's father was in a good position, and besides being bound for a large sum, would get bound in honor to see that the prisoner answered to his bail. He would make the bail a heavy one, namely, one bondsman in £500, or two of £300 each. Prisoner's father and brother-in law were accepted for bond, and the prisoner and witnesses were bound over to appear at the next Quarter Sessions, or at such time or place as the Attorney-General may appoint. It was mentioned several times that the trial will take place in Sydney, at the Quarter Sessions to be held on September 25.

PARLIAMENT OF VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

In the Legislative Council, the Railways Temporary Advances Bill was read a first time. The debate on the second reading of the Tramways Bill, introduced by Mr. Cuthbert, authorizing local municipal bodies to construct tramways, was resumed. The debate on the Tramways Bill was adjourned for a fortnight.

In the Legislative Assembly, Mr. Munro asked whether it was true that Messrs Beyer, Peacock, and Company, of Manchester, England, had declined to tender for the supply of twenty-five locomotives required for the railways. Mr. Bent requested that notice should be given of the question. The House then went into committee, for the further consideration of the Railway Bill. The discussion upon the proposed line from Kerang to Swan Hill, and the amendment that Boort should be the starting point of the line, was resumed. Maps, showing the large extent of the Riverine territory, and portion of South Australia, and upon which were marked the authorized and projected lines of New South Wales and South Australia, as well as the proposed Victorian railways, were distributed. Mr. Woods intimated his intention of moving that the line be carried from Kerang to Wentworth to secure the trade of the south-western portion of Riverina, the line would then be of national importance. If such a line were not authorized now, New South Wales and South Australia would very shortly meet at North-west Bend, for New South Wales would continue the Hay line in that direction; but if the proposal to carry the line to Wentworth was agreed to at once, New South Wales would probably withdraw rather than be engaged in a competition for traffic. He reminded hon. members that the New South Wales Government could construct and work railways much cheaper than Victoria. The average cost of the New South Wales lines was under £15,000 per mile, whilst those of Victoria cost £20,000. Both colonies would shortly have 1300 miles open, but Victoria would have to pay interest on £6,000,000 or £7,000,000 more than New South Wales. He argued that the new line would be the best paying in the colony. In connection with the Riverina trade, little was heard of besides wool, but that constituted a very small proportion of the traffic. If a railway was constructed to Wentworth, abattoirs would probably be established there, and a large traffic in frozen meat, which could be frozen before being placed in the trucks, would be secured, as also a large trade in hides, tallow, and gypsum—deep beds of which had been discovered in the Malee Scrub. Mr. Fraser contended that railway traffic could never compete with water carriage, and that a railway to Wentworth would bring no increase of Riverina trade. What Victoria ought to do was to co-operate with the New South Wales Government, snag the Darling, to improve the navigation of that river, and of the Murrumbidgee and Murray. Then he maintained the traffic would be retained to this colony. There was no prospect of the railway to Wentworth being profitable, for after going a few miles from Echuca the country was entirely devoted to sheep-farming. It was absurd to imagine that squatters would discharge wool at Swan Hill or Wentworth, when, for a trifle more, they could get it carried to Echuca, which was only 156 miles from Melbourne. A very lengthy discussion ensued, lasting until the adjournment of the House. The House appeared to be very much divided regarding the line, some Ministerial members being opposed to an extension to Swan Hill, either from Kerang or Boort, whilst others were in favour of the Boort starting point. Sir Bryan O'Loghlen suggested, as a compromise, that a line be made from Kerang to Swan Hill, and that the Boort line be extended, in the event of money being saved on other lines. Mr. Berry suggested that it would be better to strike Swan Hill out altogether. The debate was adjourned on the Government promising to consider what was the best course to pursue.

ADELAIDE, TUESDAY.

In the Legislative Council to-day a petition was received from the Anglican Synod asking that Bible-reading should be allowed during school hours. A notice of motion was given for Wednesday fortnight to the effect that it was necessary that the Education Act should be amended in such a manner as to enact that all Public schools shall open in the morning a quarter of an hour at least before the time fixed for secular education to commence, for the purpose of reading the Scriptures in either the authorised or the Douay version; the attendance of children at such reading not to be compulsory, and no sectarian or denominational teaching to be allowed. In reference to the exercise of the prerogative of mercy, a motion was submitted that all petitions for the release of prisoners should be considered and decided by the Executive Council instead of by the Governor only. Robert Shapland has petitioned Parliament for a bonus for the discovery of a stump-jumping plough, of which he claims to be the original inventor. The Gunpowder Magazine Bill was passed.

In the Assembly, the debate on the Budget occupied nearly the whole sitting in a very thin House. The proposals of the Government generally were favourably criticised. The taxation proposal was ridiculed as petty trumpery, and there appeared to be a general opinion that taxation was unnecessary for the purposes of revenue, and that the Treasurer had under-estimated the probable revenue of the year, especially from Customs. The debate will be resumed on Thursday. The Attorney-General has withdrawn the bill authorising the giving of bills of sale over yearly crops, in view of introducing a more perfect measure, similar to that now before the Queensland Parliament.

NEWCASTLE, TUESDAY.

A notice has been posted at the Custom House requiring the masters of all vessels before clearance to make declarations that they have complied with the crane regulations, or paid all penalties therunder for any branch committed. The Railway Department has issued circulars to all shipmasters in port, calling their attention to this provision and to the necessity of complying with the same. A similar regulation was enforced some time since, but allowed to lapse, and now it has been revived with the object of compelling the coal companies to supply all vessels to receive quantities of coal, whilst under the cranes, stipulated in the crane regulations. The complete coal export for the past week was 34,832 tons.

CARCOAR, TUESDAY.

The adjourned quarterly meeting of the Licensing Court was fixed for to-day, but in consequence of no official chairman having been appointed in the room of Mr. E. J. C. North, the police magistrate (absent on sick leave), the non-official members of the Court, Messrs. N. Connelly and Henry Glasson, were obliged to adjourn the Court to Wednesday, 16th instant. As business of much importance is impending, and a large number of persons having business before the Court were in attendance, it is to be hoped that complete arrangements for holding the Court will be made by the date named, many having come to-day long distances. Steady rain has continued here since Friday last. This evening, however, there are signs of a change.

GRAFTON, TUESDAY.

The prisoners found guilty, or who pleaded guilty yesterday, were sentenced this morning, as follows:—Barkeley, larceny, four months; Thomas Reynolds, assault, six months; James Murphy, assault with intent to do grievous bodily harm, 12 months' hard labour; W. H. O'Connor, stealing money from a dwelling, two years and six months in Grafton gaol, with hard labour.

WARREN, TUESDAY.

TEMORA, TUESDAY.

Charles Starr, free selector, found guilty of being in possession of two carcases of mutton, the property of the New Zealand Loan Company's Temora station, was fined £50 and costs, or six months' imprisonment. Probably others will be prosecuted. Every effort is being made to find the hawker who purchases the skins of stolen sheep. The losses from Temora station by stolen sheep are very heavy. Heavy rain fell during last night. There are signs of clearing up now. The rain put little water into the dams.

GUNDAGAI, TUESDAY.

A large and influential public meeting, representing the Gundagai and Adelong districts, was held here to-day, to adopt means to urge the Government to construct the Coota-mundra and Gundagai railway. Mr. J. B. Elworthy, J.P., occupied the chair. The meeting was addressed by Messrs. James M'Cvoy, J.P., David Wilson, J.P., G. W. Benson, M. W. Turner, manager of the Bank of New South Wales, Jeremiah Leary, and James M'Inerney. It was resolved to send a deputation to wait upon the Minister of Works.

BALRANALD, TUESDAY.

The weather is showery. A petition is being prepared in favour of an extension of the railway from Hay to the south side of the Murrumbidgee.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

THE TURF.

A good deal of public interest appears to be taken in the Sydney Turf Club meeting, which is to come off at Randwick to-morrow. The programme is a varied and interesting one, and in the event of the weather proving fine, the reunion promises to be most enjoyable.

A fair amount of fast work was done at Randwick yesterday morning, but nothing of a sensational character took place, and quotations upon the important events of the future remain about the same as previously mentioned.

The racecourse properties for the Turf Club meeing realized £193, and those for the Tattersall's Club meeting, which is to take place on Saturday, £282.

Nominations for the Wagga Gold Cup (enclosing 2 sovs.), the Town Plate (enclosing 2 sovs.), the Hurdle Race (enclosing 1 sov.), and the Steeplechase (enclosing 1 sov.), are to close with Mr. J. Hawkes, the secretary of the Murrumbidgee Turf Club, or the secretaries of the A. J. C. or the V. R. C., at 4 p.m. to-day.

NEW SOUTH WALES COURSING CLUB.

Patron: His Excellency the Governor. President: Mr. E. Lee. Stewards: Hon. G. Lee, M.L.C.; Messrs. P. A. Lamb, H. M'Quade, W. R. Hall, and J. Weir. Judge: Mr. W. Pitt. Slip Steward: Dr. C. Belisario. Flag Steward: Mr. J. H. Crowley. Slipper: J. Pratt.

The New South Wales Coursing Club commenced their Metropolitan Meeting at Rooty Hill, yesterday, and a very satisfactory day's sport was afforded to those who had the good fortune to be present. The weather was admirable for coursing, the sun's rays being tempered by a cool southerly breeze, which threatened at times to bring up rain, but fortunately did not do so; and the attendance, though miserably small compared with the quality of the sport and its claims to public support, was quite up to the average, and not a few ladies graced the meeting with their presence. Forty-four courses were set down for decision, but, as was expected, it was found impossible to get through the card in time to let the metropolitan visitors return to town by the 4.45 train, so the first ties of the Consolation Stakes were postponed till to-day. Some delay was experienced in getting the first brace of hounds in the slips, and at the beginning the hares were rather slow in coming out of Steele's covert on the flat, which was the first tried, 26 courses, however, were got through here before 2 o'clock, when an adjournment was made for luncheon. A move was then made for the south-eastern covert, but puss was shy, and after waiting for some time only two courses could be got off here. The north-western covert was next tried, with the result that hares were found to be very numerous, and no difficulty was experienced in getting through the list, with the exception, as stated before, of the first ties of the Consolation Stakes. As will be seen by the record below, there was an unusually large proportion of kills; but this was not because of weakness on the part of puss, as the trials were, as a rule, hardly contested, some of them being particularly severe. To this cause, and also in consequence of the ground being hard, was due the fact that many of the hounds were cut and bruised about the feet, some of them so severely that they will not be called upon during the meeting to run again. The list of casualties includes Bulgabra, who broke one of his toes, and Wild Wave, who is cut very much. Mr. Pratt's slipping was again satisfactory. The officers and stewards were attentive to their duties; Messrs. P. A. and H. Lamb and a staff of beaters were energetic in seeing that game was to the front when wanted; and Messrs. Town and Burdekin dispensed hospitality to the committee and their friends. Altogether the meeting was very enjoyable, no unpleasantness of any kind occuring. It will be concluded to-day. The following are details of the various events:—

THE WOOLLAHRA CUP.—Opening round: To a fine racing hare Captivity and Longlegs were sent away, and splendid struggle ensued between the two until the centre covert was reached. Owing to the hare bending twice Longlegs had a slight advantage, but Captivity then asserted herself, and in the remainder of long gruelling course scarcely allowed the son of Bashful Dan to score a point. Crowbar was quickest out of slips, but Albert reached his hare first, and put in the first four before the former got in again. Crowbar, however, was unable to wipe off the deficiency before puss escaped to the centre covert. Teddington led Tamaleo from slips by two or three lengths, and reached his game first; but the hare breaking back enabled Tamaleo to get in. The latter was very busy for a time, doing some excellent work; but after this, whenever there was a stretch out, Teddington showed more pace, and made a couple of splendid drives. Tamaleo, however, was not to be denied, as she succeeded in putting enough points together to cause the dog to be hoisted in her favour, before Teddington drove in splendidly and killed. Cassius led up by two or three lengths, and turned, placing Little Buttercup, who won the rest of a hard trial with points to spare. Windsor and Patience went away from slips locked together, but the former reached the hare first, placing Patience. Several exchanges then took place; but the advantage seemed to be with Windsor when Mr. Park's slut rushed in and killed cleverly, and the judge's decision was given in her favour. Handsome Girl was fastest from slips, but Avon Countess got the turn, placing the former, who shortly afterwards killed and won. First Ties: Captivity was fastest from slips by several lengths, got the turn, and did all the work in a trial of moderate length before Albert rushed in and killed. To a good hare Tamaleo showed Little Buttercup the way, and put a good deal to his credit before the latter got a chance. Little Buttercup then assumed command, but was unable to wipe out deficiencies before the hare escaped. Handsome Girl led up, got the turn, and put the next two or three to her credit before Patience asserted herself. The latter, working her hare very cleverly, won a good course comfortably before the hare got back to covert.

THE CUMBERLAND STAKES.—Opening round: Lilac led Castanette from slips by a dozen lengths, and did not permit her to score a point before puss escaped to the centre covert. Trojan was speediest away from slips, and, reaching his hare first, put some points together before Crocus got in. In the remainder of a long gruelling course Trojan showed undoubted superiority over Mr. Bladon's dog, and wound up with a meritorious kill. Lisle Lad raced past My Lord from slips, and put in the first three before Mr. M'Quade's dog got in. The latter did some good work until Lisle Lad resumed possession and kept it almost continuously till the finish of the course, when he rushed in and killed for a win. Lisle Lass and Leanthe were locked together from slips until these reached the hare. Puss then bent round in favour of the fawn, and she put the next six or seven to her credit before Lisle had got in. A very severe trial resulted in favour of Mr. Low's dog, with a great deal to spare, the merit of the win being added to by a clever kill. Latest News led up from slips and turned, placing Tangle. Some exchanges took place, in which the advantage lay with Latest News. Tangle then drove in and killed, too soon for him to equalise matters. The course, however, was a very close thing. Bulgabra beat M.E. almost pointless in a moderate trial, finishing up with a kill. Lollie was faster than Handmaid from slips, but there was little difference between them by the time they got to the hare. A short dodgy course followed, resulting in favour of Lollie, who killed. Bess led up Wyndham by a couple of lengths, and put several points together before Wyndham got a chance. Bess ran wide several times, and Wyndham getting in was rapidly equalizing matters when he spoilt his chance by running in and killing. Pastime did not allow Snowflight to score a point in a short trial, ending with a kill by Pastime. Birdling led up by several lengths from slips, and did a lot of work before Linnet got in. Linnet was cleverer than her opponent, but she was unable to avert defeat before Birdling drove in and killed. Wilberforce led up Kizzie from slips by two or three lengths, and rapidly put several points together. Kizzie then got in, kept possession till puss escaped, and won comfortably. First Ties: Lilac led up Trojan, and did all the work in the early part of a long trial. Trojan got in towards the finish, but puss escaped to covert before he could do much towards wiping out the deficiency. Latest News had all the best of a stiff trial with Lisle Lad; Lollie beat Bess, and Birdling beat Pastime. Kizzie ran a bye.

THE CONSOLATION STAKES.—In a short trial to the centre covert, where puss was killed, Longshanks showed superiority at every point over Blackleaf. Tourist raced away from Cabuman, who seemed to be waiting for a fare, and had a straight run to the centre covert, where puss got away. Harlect led up Linden Lass, and scored freely for a time. Linden Lass then got in, and working her hare cleverly and well, won with points to spare before the hare beat them both. Presto was speediest from slips, but the hare circled round to Dairymaid, who took advantage of the opening, and afterwards had no difficulty in disposing of her opponent. Presto wound up an interesting course with a good kill. Pilgrim led up and turned, placing Lothair, who killed and lost. Bonelon hung in the slips, and Careless Dick went away with a long lead and kept his advantage till the hare got away, Bonelon appearing to be quite "green." Lanlard led up, turned, and did a lot of work before Larrikin got in. A long gruelling trial ensued, in which Larrikin had considerably the best of it, and he completed a decisive victory with a smart kill. In a short dodgy trial, ending with a kill, Wollongong won with something to spare from The Gem. To a good racing hare Wild Wave led up Traveller, and beat him conclusively, the red dog being scarcely permitted to score during a lengthy trial. To a long slip The Barb led up Leah, and reaching his hare first, put the first two or three to his credit; Leah then got in, but did not long maintain her position, The Barb ultimately winning a good course with something to spare. Huntress beat Charley easily in an uninteresting trial. In a straightaway course to the south-eastern covert Lilian proved her superiority at every point over Ruby.

THE INTERCOLONIAL FOOTBALL MATCH.

The committee appointed by the Southern Rugby Football Union to choose the team in the forthcoming match with Queensland, on Saturday next, have selected the following players to represent New South Wales, subject to any alteration they may deem advisable. The team will practised yesterday on Moore Park:—Brodie, back; Creer, Phillips, Walker, half-backs; Bennett, Flynn, Rendford, quarter-backs; Clements, Lindeman, Pell, Raper, Richmond, Tange, Thallon, Thallon, forwards; 16th, M'Manamey.

FOOTBALL.

A splendid game of football between the Parramatta Union and Eton Football Clubs was exhibited at Parramatta last Saturday, before a large concourse of spectators, and resulted in an easy victory for the former by 1 goal 6 tries to nil. H. Davies and Mitchelson were the respective captains. Both clubs were short, the Union playing with 13 men, and the Etons with 11. From the beginning it was evident that the Etons were overmatched, but great praise is due to them for the gallant manner in which they played an uphill game. For the local team H. Davies (captain), Garlick, Wickham, P. Midwinter, and Martin were conspicuous for their brilliant play (especially the two latter), whilst for the Etons Mitchelson (captain), Burrowes, Hodgson, and M'Laughlin showed in a like manner.

A meeting of the committeein connection with the Francis Punch Rowing Trophy was held last evening at Punch's Hotel, Mr. W. R. Benson in the chair. After some discussion the date for the races was fixed for Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, 3rd, 5th, and 7th October, provided sufficient entries were received for three days' racing; otherwise the races will be rowed on Thursday and Saturday, 5th and 7th October. This it was supposed would give Laycock and Pearce, who are believed to have left England in the s.s. Soracta on 13th July, sufficient time for training. Largan is also supposed to be coming by the same steamer. Entries will be received at Punch's Hotel on the evening of Saturday, 16th September, between 8 and 9 o'clock. It was decided that the committee reserve the right of refusing the entry of any person they may think fit. Letters from Laycock and Pearce, Largan and Rush were read, intimating their intention to take part in the contest. The prizes are £200, £70, and £30.

OVERLAND PASSENGER TRAFFIC.

ALBURY, TUESDAY.

The following passed through to-day:—

For Sydney: Miss M'Candlish, Mr. and Mrs. Hansen and child, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Alderson, Miss Gray, Messrs. A. Dickson, P. B. Crickard, J. Williamson, J. J. Dowdell, G. Whittingham, R. S. Thompson, L. Bernard, P. Glanister, J. E. Gray, A. Bart, J. Allen, A. Harper, S. Barnard, A. Hallenbeng, A. M. Kirker, G. H. Adams, and Wolseley.

For Melbourne: Mr. and Mrs. J. Usher Johnston, Mrs. Williams and child, Miss Walmouth, Miss Watts, Miss L. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Cummins, Miss Hammond, Messrs. A. Booth and Masters Booth (2), H. Blacksmith, R. Fenn, C. H. Royce, C. Elliott, R. Howitt, G. Murray, A. H. Thorpe, A. Evell, R. Wrigley, J. Croft, A. Ellis, W. Martin, N. Willis, W. Dyer, A. M'Vitty, H. R. M'Vitty, G. Hardie, W. T. Raleigh, J. Niven, and K. C. Brodribb.

AMUSEMENTS.

The fourth of the series of winter entertainments given at All Saints' School, Woollahra, in aid of the church organ fund, was held last night, and was a thorough success. It was an amateur concert, the hall in which it was held was crowded, and everyone seemed to enjoy the efforts of the singers and instrumentalists. As these ladies and gentlemen were all amateurs, whose names were not published or announced, it will not be necessary here to do more than give the programme performed. It was as follows:—Chorus, "How lovely are the messengers" (St. Paul), Mendelssohn; song, "My song shall be of mercy" (Daughter of Jairus), Stainer; duet, "O lovely peace" (Judas Maccabeus), Handel; recit. and air, "Angels ever bright and fair" (Theodora), Handel; solo and chorus, "The Children's Kingdom," Blumenthal; two-part song, "Night is down the valley stealing," G. A. Macfarren (by All Saints' choir boys); pianoforte solo: a, "Tarantella" in F, Rheinberger—b, "Chant des Marins," Kotten; song, "Si tu m'aimais," Denza; tart song, "Farewell," Gallinick; song, "A weary soul," V. Gabriel; old English ballad, "Barbara Allen"; song; part song, "The Vikings" (by desire), Eaton Fanlings.

The "Patience" Opera Company, now performing in Melbourne, will (we learn from our Melbourne correspondent), shortly visit the principal towns of the Victorian provinces, whence they will subsequently proceed to Adelaide.

"STATUTE LAW" ON DUMMYISM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The long letter of "Statute Law" on Dummyism, in this morning's Herald, would have had some value if its writer had been more accurate. The Statute of Frauds has nothing whatever to do with any of the prohibitions contained in the ninth section of the "Lands Act Amendment Act, 1875;" and your correspondent is guilty of an extraordinary blunder in supposing that by the Statute of Frauds "every contract and agreement relating to land must be in writing." That statute merely prevents the bringing of an action at law—or a suit in Equity, as the Judges have held—to enforce such a contract or agreement. The contracts themselves are perfectly legal, and, indeed, often operate as licenses. This blunder vitiates a good deal of your correspondent's reasoning. The second inaccuracy in his letter is not of so much importance. It consists in his treating the relation of agent, servant, or trustee as a "status." If he had known his Roman law better, he would not have made that mistake. "Status est qualitas cujus rationes homines diverso jure utuntur,"—not badly translated by Mr. Westlake: "the peculiar condition of a person, whereby what is law for the average citizen is not law for him." Infants, aliens, married women, lunatics, and some others give rise to questions as to "status"; but not the classes of persons mentioned in this 9th section of the Act of 1875.

The third is hardly an inaccuracy; it is a suggestio falsi, but is the most mischievous feature in the letter. The false suggestion consists in the impunity inferentially claimed by "Statute Law" for offences unaccompanied by contract within the first prohibition of section 9. It is laid down by unquestionable authority that wherever a statute forbids the doing of a thing, the doing it wilfully is indictable as a misdemeanour at Common Law. The statutory misdemeanour created by the 10th section covers the offence of entering into certain illegal contracts; but the Common Law misdemeanour of violating the express prohibition of an Act of Parliament is not affected by the fact that the Legislature has declared that the offender may be sentenced to two years' hard labour if he has entered into an illegal contract in the process or for the purpose of violating the Act, that mere violation (apart from any accompanying contract or agreement) itself constituting, in fact, a misdemeanour at Common Law; for which the offender may be punished by both fine and imprisonment, the former unlimited, the latter limited (it is thought) to two years. Take a case. A, a trusty servant of B (a squatter), gets a hint from C that the best thing he can do with his money is to take up 640 acres on B's run. "for B will do the 'right thing' by him (A) in time." C, acting for B, lends A the whole or part of the deposit (£160). A takes up the land, and afterwards, in due course, transfers to B. There is no question of contract or agreement here, but will anyone say that the Act has not been violated, and that the offence is not indictable at Common Law?

NEWS BY THE ENGLISH MAIL, VIA SUEZ.

The Sydney portion of the English mails brought by the R. M. S. Rome, via Suez, were transmitted overland from Melbourne, and delivered from the General Post Office yesterday. The latest London date is June 30.

ENGLISH AND FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, JUNE 30.

The past fortnight has produced a series of remarkable events in connection with the Egyptian difficulty. I have more than once alluded to the dubious attitude assumed by some of the Consuls-General in Alexandria. Shortly after the dispatch of my last letter two of those gentlemen performed a change of front, and instead of professing to aid their colleagues in securing the recognition of the Anglo-French policy in endeavouring to bring about the expulsion of Arabi Pasha, the representatives of Austria and Germany, indirectly backed up by Italy, proposed the recognition of the new Egyptian Ministry, composed as it is of the creatures of the Dictator. The Ragheb Administration is constituted entirely of Arabi's nominees, Arabi himself of course, maintaining his old position as Minister of War. In other words, the line taken by Austria and Germany admitted the impossibility of doing without Arabi Pacha, and was a recognition of his being the most powerful person in Egypt. This proceeding tended to disturb the entire diplomacy of Europe, and had it not been for the persistence of England and France in their conference proposal, and the adhesion of Germany, Austria, and Italy to that suggestion, the part taken by the two Consuls-General referred to at Alexandria, might have led to most serious consequences. So far as England and France are concerned, their representatives in Egypt have refrained from recognising in any way the new Ministry. They have also withdrawn from the commission of inquiry which the new Egyptian Government is supposed to be instituting into the outrages of the 11th instant, and from a diplomatic point of view the internal affairs of Egypt, as far as they relate to our own Government, are almost in as bad a state as the internal relations of that country. Arabi Pasha and the Khedive have a cordial animosity towards each other, and although they drive about Alexandria together in order to calm the public mind and prevent another outbreak among the people, this professed friendship is purely superficial.

The situation as Alexandria has been further complicated by the action of the Sultan. It has suited his purposes to regard the nomination of the Ragheb Ministry as a settlement of all Egyptian difficulties, and he has even gone to the extent of complimenting the Khedive on the one hand for the line he has taken under the trying circumstances by which he has been surrounded, while on the other hand he actually forwarded a high decoration to Tewfik's rival, Arabi. The object of the Sultan in taking these steps is not easy to define; but this, at any rate, is apparent, that his Majesty considers the Conference unnecessary, and has assumed such an attitude of antagonism towards it that immediately it was pressed on him with anything like urgency he at once abandoned his concession to send an army of intervention to Alexandria. A fortnight ago there seemed every possibility of an early settlement of the Egyptian difficulty being accomplished through the acceptance by the Porte of the duty it was invited by England and France to undertake, namely, that the Sultan, as Suzerain, should interfere with a military force and bring about the expulsion of Arabi Pasha and the reduction of the army. It, however, soon became apparent that the Turk was not acting straightforwardly, and M. de Freycinet therefore insisted on the Conference which is now being held at Constantinople, even without the assistance of the Porte. The successful convention of this diplomatic gathering has led the Porte to adopt an entirely new attitude. The Sultan is now offering a negative opposition to all that the Powers require, and the line he has thus taken is so distinctly pronounced that England and France are preparing to do without the assistance of the Sultan, should it be absolutely refused.

The main objects of the Conference, according to the published statements, are to restore the status quo and to maintain the special privileges which the Powers already possess in Egypt, and which Egypt herself enjoys at the hands of her Suzerain. It has also been decided that all subjects but those relating to Egypt are to be excluded from the deliberations of the ambassadors. It is not clear, however, to what extent the Suez Canal will come under review; but it is evident that England has made declarations as to her intentions and interests in regard to that waterway which amount to a refusal on her part to be bound by any decision the Conference may come to on that subject. The ground taken by the Porte in respect of this conference is characteristic. The Sultan trusts to the latent rivalries and jealousies among the Powers as likely to bring about a failure in the deliberations of the conference. No two powers, it is argued, with the exception perhaps of Germany and Austria, are really at one upon the Egyptian question. Although England and France profess to have a common object in view, each argues that the Turk is striving to obtain predominance in Egypt, and the two Powers hold opposite opinions as to the best means of re-establishing order. On the one hand, England desires the Sultan to send an expedition to Cairo, while France believes that a Turkish occupation would prove a fatal blow to her North African policy. Italy, it is suggested, takes little interest in the question of how order is to be re-established, but she is determined if possible to get a share in the control, and this desire will bring her into conflict with England and France. The interests of Russia are not immediate, but she wishes to have a voice in Egyptian affairs in order to get the Canal neutralised, so that in time of war England may not be able to send troops and munitions by that route to India. Nor does the Turk believe in the willingness of Germany and Austria to promote an Anglo-French predominance in Egypt. There is considerable ground for this view on the part of the Stamboul authorities. The Powers are undoubtedly much divided in opinion, and the line taken by Germany and Austria on the appointment of the Ragheb Ministry, and the recognition of Arabi Pasha, are serious obstacles to anything short of a compromise resulting from the Conference. There can be no doubt whatever that the Austro German influence is stronger at Constantinople than any other, and if through the exercise of this influence Arabi Pasha's position was lately recognized at Alexandria, it almost follows that the line taken by those two Powers in the Conference will be upon the same basis. Another difficulty which confronts us is as to how the decrees of the Conference are to be enforced. The general supposition is that Turkey will be invited as suzerain to carry out the decisions at which the Conference may arrive. Considering that Turkey has all through opposed the Conference, which it has declared to be unnecessary, and has hesitated to carry out any form of military intervention in Egypt lest the Sultan's position as Caliph should be jeopardised by Arabi joining the ranks of Abdul Hamid's rival in the Caliphate, it becomes exceedingly doubtful whether the Porte will, under any circumstances, act as the policeman of Europe. Supposing, therefore, that the Conference should be successful in arriving at definite schemes of reform for Egypt, we shall then be confronted with the difficulty as to how those schemes are to be carried into effect. England and France have shown their appreciation of this consideration by active military preparations that will enable them to perform the functions which in all probability the Sultan will decline to discharge.

The recently published correspondence throws less discredit on England than the opponents of the Government had been led to expect. It is evident that from the very commencement of this Egyptian difficulty the Gladstone Cabinet found the French alliance hanging, like a millstone, round its neck. This fact has been very detrimental to the criticism of the Opposition. It may be fairly asked, on the perusal of that correspondence, what would have happened had Messrs. Salisbury and Co. been in office? As friends of the Turk they would have done little to annoy his Majesty in the Nile valley. As authors of the Anglo-French entrol they would have been bound, quite as much as Mr. Gladstone has permitted himself to be, to keep pace with France, and to move no further than she was disposed to do. There is, therefore, a good deal of leather and prunella about the criticisms the Tory party are endeavouring to substantiate against Mr. Gladstone's policy. Now that the views of the Powers are better understood, and after it has been made clear to France that energetic action in Egypt is an absolute necessity, England is moving forward with greater earnestness than she has hitherto done. Under the pretence—the wisdom of which no one denies—of defending the Suez Canal, which is a separate question altogether from what is known as the Egyptian difficulty, Mr. Gladstone's Government are prepared to despatch an army corps to Egypt and to assist its operations by a contingent from India. They notified to France their intention to take this step some ten days or a fortnight ago, and the French Government thereupon followed the British example by making preparations that will enable her to throw an army of twenty thousand men into Egypt in case of necessity. If, therefore, the Conference fails to accomplish its objects, or if the Sultan should refuse to carry out its resolves, or if, apart from these two questions, Arabi should carry out his threat of damaging the Canal, there is every prospect of a military intervention, either by England alone or by this country in conjunction with France. Should the Powers agree upon selecting one of their number to act as mandatoire, their choice would unquestionably fall on England, whom they would all trust, not only more than they would France, but even more alone than if combined with France. The official correspondence discloses the remarkable circumstance that when Anglo-French intervention was discussed some time ago, Germany opposed it, not on the ground that Prince Bismarck distrusted the bona fides of England, but because he feared a joint occupation would lead to a quarrel between the two Powers themselves.

In connection with this Egyptian business may be mentioned that evidence increases of the Turkish party, if not the Sultan himself, being the real origin of the Egyptian difficulty. When, within the last few days it seemed likely that Turkey would despatch a military force in order to suppress Arabi Pasha, that person declared that if he fell the Khedive should fall with him; and he further announced his intention that in the event of the Sultan throwing him over he would publish correspondence which would show the world that every step he has taken since last September has been the result of advice from the Sultan or of his immediate entourage. Those of your readers who follow this subject closely will be interested in seeing how much responsibility for Arabi's attitude of antagonism towards England is owing to the conduct of Sir. W. H. Gregory and Mr. Wilfred Blunt. Those gentlemen have professed to act as the mouthpiece of the National party, but have not been content with simply explaining their views to the English public. It is evident from Arabi's declarations, and from the statements of English officials in Egypt, that Mr. Blunt, especially, has been a mischievous adviser of the Dictator. An interesting communication in the Standard of yesterday discloses that the grievances of the military party against the Khedive has arisen, not so much from the disposition of the Khedive to act under the Anglo-French control as from his Highness' weakness in permitting the Circassian and Georgian favourites in the harem at Cairo to monopolise the patronage of the army.

The attitude of the Conservative party over the Egyptian crisis has not been over-prudent. The Government have been careful to explain all they felt at liberty to disclose, pending the sitting of the Conference; but notwithstanding this circumstance, the Conservatives have lost no opportunity of badgering the Secretary and Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs with needless questions day by day. It is not, perhaps, altogether unnatural that political opponents should have availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by recent events of assailing a Ministry whom they credit with being specially weak in matters of foreign policy. But her Majesty's Government, however short they may have fallen of the desires of many Englishmen, have undoubtedly experienced greater difficulties in connection with this subject than anybody outside Downing-street can possibly have been aware of. In the first instance, they were tied by the French alliance; in the next they had to deal with the inscrutable and unspeakable Turk, whose peculiar type of Oriental diplomacy is very far in advance of Western experiences. But this is not all. Her Majesty's Government have had to encounter the tergiversation of their supposed ally, and the anything but straightforward action of their professed friends. Germany, Austria, Italy, and Russia have been playing their own game in this Egyptian business, and the result has been a combination of diplomatic difficulties almost sufficient to overwhelm any modern statesman. But the Conservative opposition have not shown any forbearance towards the Gladstone Cabinet, and in this respect have provided its own commentary for the criticism they heaped on Mr. Gladstone and the Liberal party when the latter ventured to review the policy of the Conservatives in connection with the Russo-Turkish war. Unpatriotic as the action of many Radicals unquestionably was on that occasion there was no instance of their calling a meeting of the party while the Conferences were sitting, either in Berlin or Constantinople. It was left to the Conservatives to adopt that step, and yesterday witnessed a great meeting of their number in Willis's Rooms. Professedly it was a meeting of a non-party character, but a review of the names as published will show that about nine-tenths of those present were well-known Conservatives, discontented Whigs, or else large holders of Egyptian bonds. The fact that a man like Mr. Bouverie was in the chair, that Lord Salisbury, Sir Stafford Northcote, and Mr. W. H. Smith were on the platform, and that admission to the room was by ticket, stamps the entire business with an obvious Conservative trade-mark. Perhaps the most remarkable circumstance in connection with the meeting is that it offered throughout no indication of a policy which the Conservatives think the Government ought to pursue. The speeches were purely destructive criticism, with the exception, perhaps, of one very notable phrase used by Lord Salisbury, when he, as the author of the Anglo-French alliance, actually told the country the Government need not necessarily adhere to that arrangement. Probably the best criticism on the gathering is to be found in the remarkable letter written by Lord Randolph Churchill, and published on the day of the meeting. The noble Lord protested against the holding of such a meeting, and sat severely in judgment on the Tory chiefs for having announced their intention to take part in so "curiously futile and ridiculous a proceeding."

To-day's newspapers furnish another startling item in the long and terrible record of Irish crime. Mr. J. H. Blake, agent to the Marquis of Clanricarde, and his bailiff, Mr. Thady Kane, were yesterday shot by a gang of men concealed behind a wall within half a mile of Loughrea. Mr. Blake and his servant were driving into that town for the purpose of attending a meeting of landlords and graziers, called with a view of protecting their interests against a new association formed by the herdsmen. They had reached a portion of the road where good cover was afforded for the work of assassination, when shots were fired from behind the stone wall under circumstances precisely similar to those attending the murder of Mr. Bourke and his dragoon escort only three weeks ago. Mrs. Blake, who was sitting beside her husband, was slightly injured; the horse received a wound and ran away, but the courageous lady seized the reins, and drove to the nearest town, where she obtained assistance, and where the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church were administered to the two victims. Mr. Blake had received many threatening letters during the last few months warning him of the fate intended for him if he persisted in issuing ejectment decrees against Lord Clanricarde's tenants. Of these threats he took no notice, and only at a recent quarter sessions he obtained a number of ejectment processes, of which his assassination seems to have been the consequence. Mr. Blake was 70 years of age, and a fine handsome man, who was greatly respected by all who knew him, and who, until very lately, was one of the most popular men in that part of Ireland.

The Prevention of Crime in Ireland Bill will not be through the committee stage for at least another week or ten days. The Government have yielded important alterations in various parts of the measure; but none of them go so far as to affect the general principle of the bill, and public opinion fully approves of the course the Ministry has taken. The occurrence of one or two startling outrages in Ireland—notably the murder of Mr. Bourke and the dragoon who acted as his escort—have served to strengthen the hands of the Government in maintaining a firm front. This remark will also apply to the recent discovery of arms at Clerkenwell, and the insight which this circumstance has given us of the Fenian organization existing in our midst. The attitude of the Irish party has been exceedingly bellicose. Every section—almost every line—of each consecutive clause, has been contested by them; and whenever the rules of the House would permit, they have delayed business, not only on the bill itself, but on every conceivable subject having any relationship with Ireland. The questions they have managed to crowd upon the notice-paper night after night have frequently proved a serious block to the orders of the day, and the marvel is that the House of Commons has hitherto refrained from declaring their conduct wilfully obstructive. If the "urgency" order of last year had been in operation, and it had not been a certainty that a night or two more of the present session would have been required to have converted it into a standing rule of procedure, the Government would, undoubtedly, have brought it into use in the passage of the present measure long ago.

The past fortnight has witnessed several sharp encounters between the Irish Nationalists on the one hand and Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Bright, and Mr. Trevelyan on the other. The abusive epithets which Mr. Healy, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, and Mr. Sexton are constantly showering on Mr. Bright are almost as objectionable as the Parliamentary Billingsgate with which the same unruly members were in the habit of assailing the late Chief Secretary, Mr. Forster. The persistent virulence of their attacks on Mr. Bright is probably traceable to the damaging speeches he has made against them from time to time, especially in the case of those among them who took a prominent part in the movement which is now being directed from America against this country. Although by reason of his present position as Irish Secretary, Mr. Trevelyan is having anything but an easy time of it, that gentleman has been more successful than his predecessor in modifying the resentment of the Home Rule party, notwithstanding that his responses to their demands frequently amount to an absolute refusal. When once the Crime Bill has passed the House of Commons little difficulty will be experienced in getting it through the Upper Chamber. It is unlikely that the Lords will debate the measure at any length, the probability being that it will pass its successive stages on consecutive nights. There is also better news as to the treatment the Lords intend to give to the Arrears Bill, whenever that measure may chance to reach them. According to the accounts received during the last day or two, divided councils are beginning to operate among the Peers. The purely political section would incline either to reject the bill altogether, in order to embarrass the Government, or to convert the proposed advances to the Irish tenants into a loan, instead of a gift. It happens, however, that the House of Peers is largely composed of Irish landlords, whose personal interests would be promoted by securing the payment of a portion of their outstanding rents under the provisions of this bill—a consideration which has induced many of these gentlemen to put such a pressure on the leaders of the Conservative majority, that the measure now stands in less danger than was anticipated three weeks ago. As a matter of party feeling, the Lords would prefer to inflict a blow on the Government by emasculating the bill, but as many of their number can ill afford to submit to any further loss of the rental on their Irish estates, they seem disposed to make a virtue of necessity, and accept the sop which is evidently intended for them by Mr. Gladstone's proposal. There is another circumstance which is equally influencing the leaders of the Conservative party. Immediately Mr. Gladstone's scheme was announced, journalists and statesmen on the Conservative side endeavoured to make it appear that a very large sum would be required from the Consolidated Fund, over and above the balance of the Irish Church surplus. Mr. Gladstone has quietly met this objection by producing a Treasury minute, showing that the Irish Church surplus is likely to furnish the whole of the means that will be necessary under this bill.

The action of the Irish party during the progress of the Crimes Prevention Bill, coupled with the experience the House of Commons has had of that body during the last few years, has led Mr. Gladstone to speak very plainly of the absolute necessity of a reformation of the rules of procedure. It will be remembered that the right hon. gentleman abandoned his scheme of procedure reform some weeks ago, when fresh coercive legislation was rendered necessary by the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke. Since that event the procedure resolutions have been laid on the shelf, but the obstruction which has characterized the progress of the Crimes Bill has afforded a convincing illustration of the imperative need for dealing with this question in an effective shape at the earliest possible moment. Mr. Gladstone has emphatically declared to the House of Commons the necessity for this step, and has even gone to the extent of threatening that, if it be found impossible to effect a settlement of this urgent matter before the rising of the House this autumn, it will be the duty of the Government to summon Parliament for a special session before the year has closed, in order that the rules of procedure may be reformed prior to the meeting of the Legislature in the year ensuing.

At the present moment members of Parliament are discussing the question whether it would be more advisable to prolong the present session, so as to deal with the procedure rules before the prorogation, or whether there should be a special sitting for the purpose of grappling with this subject before Christmas. The fact that Mr. Gladstone has acknowledged his readiness to make important concessions inclines one to the belief that the Commons would prefer to sit into September rather than subject themselves to the inconvenience of an additional meeting in November or December. Mr. Gladstone has not exactly defined the nature of his intended concessions, but it is understood that he means to give way on the important subject of the cloture. Some months ago I expressed the opinion that there was a general feeling in the country in favour of a majority of two to one, pure and simple. Mr. Gladstone's latest indications on this topic seem likely to result in the adoption of this principle. The chief matter of doubt is in relation to the question as to whether or not he will maintain the safeguards with which the House of Commons has already surrounded the rights of minorities. You will remember that a somewhat complicated arrangement was suggested, under which the cloture could not be adopted at all unless the majority exceeded a certain number over the minority. A simpler method would be to make the cloture an arrangement of two to one, without the dead weight which would arise from conditions as to the relative proportions of those present on both sides of the House. Nevertheless, whatever the concessions Mr. Gladstone may make, they cannot fail to subject him to severe criticism, on account of the pressure he put upon his followers in the early part of the session in order to secure the carrying out of the proposals he is now prepared to abandon. As the time approaches for dealing with the procedure question we shall learn more than we know at present as to the exact nature of his concessions. Should these be of a substantial character, the House will not have to sit long in order to carry the proposed reforms, as it would be impossible for the leaders of the Opposition to secure the allegiance of the whole of their followers in any party attitude they may adopt on this subject. There are a sufficient number of Conservatives ready to assist Mr. Gladstone if he be only willing to make substantial concessions on one or two leading points. Public opinion is already disposed to blame the Prime Minister for the incompleteness of his proposals. It is the Radical section of the House, who, from a punctilious desire to safeguard the minority, are the real opponents of Mr. Gladstone's policy. It seems extraordinary to men of business that the House of Commons, which can pass an Act of Parliament by a simple majority, and thereby disestablish a church, change a whole system of land tenure, or decree the expenditure of millions of money, cannot be induced to determine, on the same principle, not that such and such a proposal shall become law, but that it has sufficiently discussed a particular measure, and will at once proceed to a division. It is strange that the business capacity of the House of Commons, in this, as in other respects, is inferior to that of every other representative institution in the Kingdom. There is not a town council, commission, or board of guardians that would permit its business to be transacted in the clumsy and unsatisfactory fashion which distinguishes the time-honoured action of the House of Commons.

Since the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke the funds of the Land League have maintained a material diminution. Subscriptions have of late been coming in in such inconsiderable sums that the League is not receiving sufficient from week to week to maintain its organization; and although the public have little reliable information on the subject, an impression prevails that the Land League officials have been compelled to fall back on the invested capital of the association. There are also complaints from Ireland that a very small proportion of the money finds its way to the relief of the suffering tenants, who, relying upon, and at the instigation of the League, have permitted themselves to be evicted rather than repudiate the "no rent" manifesto. There is likewise a growing belief that an undue quota of the funds are expended to the advantage of the leading officials. The differences of opinion that have arisen between Mr. Parnell and Mr. Davitt within the past three weeks have had the effect of checking the sympathy of Irish patriots in America, and at the present moment the Land League organization is in a depressed and disturbed condition. It is unfortunate for that body that at this particular juncture is should be threatened with opposition from an unexpected and powerful quarter. Mr. A. M. Kavanagh, who sat for Carlow during the last Parliament, and who, though, the object of sympathy on account of his physical deficiencies, nature having denied him the limbs that are given to other mortals, was one of the ablest of the Irish representatives on the Conservative side of the House, has succeeded in organizing an Irish Land Corporation. This association, which has been established under the Limited Liability Act, with a capital of three-quarters of a million sterling, has for its object the overthrow of the boycotting system; the eviction of tenants, where necessary, in whole colonies, if the latter is backed by the support of the Land League; and the substitution of persons who will combine for their own defence, will purchase farms, and endeavour in every way to encourage the promotion of agriculture in Ireland. By giving fixed rents and judicial leases to their tenants the Land Corporation propose to confer on them an independent status. This movement has caused intense commotion among the Irish members and the leaders of the Land League, and on more than one occasion the Home Rule section have sought to induce the Government to suppress the new organization. Conduct such as this is eminently characteristic of the poltroon spirit which has distinguished the action of these self-styled defenders of Irish interests. We have seen it abundantly exemplified in the conduct of those who "put" their landlords from behind stone walls, and do the work of outrage and mutilation disguised in false beards and crape masks. It was even manifested in the case of Mr. Parnell, who, when his life was threatened by Fenians after his public condemnation of the Dublin murders, did not scruple to go whining to the Home Office authorities for special protection. It is hardly surprising, therefore, that now, when the chiefs of the League have found themselves confronted by a powerful organization, pronounced by competent authority to be perfectly legal, they should resort to the pusillanimous endeavour to procure its extinction. It is a pity that this counter movement was not initiated long ago. Had such a body as the Land Corporation been established a few months since, in conjunction with a system of tenants defence association, we should probably have heard of fewer acts of murder and outrage than have latterly darkened the annals of crime in Ireland and brought lasting disgrace on the very name of Irishmen.

The general state of things in Ireland continues as uncertain as ever. For days together there is no record of a single outrage; then follows a series of criminal acts which seem to be the result of larger and more widespread combinations than were formerly heard of. Now-a-days, when a crime has to be committed, we are told of a large gang of men taking part in it—as, for instance, in the case of the search for arms reported this week from the West of Ireland, where 10 or 12 entered a dwelling-house and seized a stand of weapons, and as also in the recent murder of Mr. Bourke and his escort, which is known to have been perpetrated by a party of five individuals. Colonel Brackenbury, the officer who has lately been placed at the head of the Irish police, is now organising a system of detection which ought to have been established long ago. Crime in Ireland can only be detected on the time-worn principle of "setting a thief to catch a thief." It cannot be effectually carried out by men in blue coats and staring regimentals. Colonel Brackenbury is consequently engaged in the formation of a body of detective police, who will be able to carry a system of espionage into the very houses of the suspected classes. This may sound un-English, but experience has shown that no middle course will prove successful, and it would seem that the very announcement of Colonel Brackenbury's scheme has already been productive of good effects. In no other way can the special evil of Fenianism be dealt with. The common informer was the means of crippling the Fenian organization some years ago, and we have again to trust to a similar agency. The recent discovery of arms at Clerkenwell has proved that a wholesale system of exportation has been carried on by one man stationed in our metropolis; and the fact that Mr. Bourke and the dragoon who accompanied him were killed by rifles bearing the same private marks as were found on the Clerkenwell weapons, affords tolerably clear proof of the success with which the Arms Act has hitherto been evaded. During the whole of the past fortnight the country has been startled by daily rumours of intended Fenian movements. Sometimes we hear of a threat to murder a Minister, sometimes a public building is to be blown up; at others a barracks is to be destroyed, and now and then we are told of an intention to explode a powder magazine. We may fairly assume that many of these rumours are groundless, and the mere result of the mischievous system of threatening-letter-writing, which unfortunately seems to grow with the spread of education among a portion of the working classes. Nevertheless, the Fenian brotherhood is undoubtedly a stronger association than the authorities at one time supposed, and the perpetration of crimes like the Phœnix Park assassinations, followed by some dozen events of a similarly diabolical character, are probably to be traced to the handiwork of that organization. We are informed also, of cases in which bodies of men are seen drilling at dawn or twilight on the hill-tops of Ireland, while assemblages of a like description are also reported from some of the large towns in England. The only fear is that these Fenian bands will not venture to put their organization on a sufficiently palpable footing to afford the military an opportunity of dealing with it in military fashion, but that the brotherhood will be content with the commission of isolated outrages and acts of vengeance with the sole object of stimulating renewed subscriptions from America. It is shrewdly suspected that a good deal of what they have hitherto done has simply had this pecuniary result in view. It is ridiculous to suppose that the Fenians can affect, in the slightest possible degree, the actions of the Government in regard to Ireland. Those who read the history of the last Fenian movement in Ireland cannot fail to perceive to how large an extent that association depended on the control of some half-a-dozen men, who were solely influenced by monetary considerations. In the present instance the same motives prevail, even to a larger extent than before; because the existence of the Land League has undoubtedly tended to benefit the state of Ireland, and has thereby rendered the policy of dynamite unnecessary. For years past, when the Fenian organization seemed to be dying out, some sudden outrage, or mysterious announcement from the other side of the Atlantic that the Fenian body were in a state of activity, gave sufficient indication that most of the acts of violence committed were prompted by the desire to "keep the pot boiling."

From our London files we take the following extracts:—

THE MASSACRE AT ALEXANDRIA.

The following private letter, published in the Times of June 30, has been received from an officer in the fleet:—

"Off Alexandria, June 17.

"My dear —,—We are dwelling in the midst of alarms, with our loins girded, &c., all ready to knock down forts and otherwise protect British interests. That was a deuce of a row last Sunday, and we were all precious lucky to get back to the ship alive. I fancy the row was arranged by Arabi, so that he could have the pleasure of putting it down; but, like every other row, it had to have some 'raison d'etre,' and this was easily found in a squabble between some Arabs and Greeks. The Arabs began to break windows, and the Greeks produced firearms and let fly among them. I was in the same street about a couple of hundred yards off, and saw the stones flying and the shooting; but though there were Arabs all about us, they never made an attempt to annoy us in any way. Presently up came some troops, all anyhow, without a single officer, and began to blaze away with great impartiality; but it struck us all that for choice they went for the Europeans. We, being between the bulk of the mob and the troops, and seeing people beginning to drop, thought, on the whole, we were not very happily placed, and having by the blessing of Providence found ourselves near a door executed a strategic movement to the left, got inside the door, and locked it. The house we got into turned out to be a sort of monastery school, and there we remained for over an hour. Meanwhile outside the fun was becoming fast and furious. The soldiers pegged away merrily and the Arabs looted. We could see them through the shutters carrying off all sorts of trash—toys, chairs, baths (and what could an Arab do with a bath?)—in fact, anything they could lay their hands on. Presently, the soldiers having evidently got our part of the town into something like order, we strolled out, trying to look as if we were not in a funk, and in fact rather liked it. My friend and I were just getting into a trap to drive down to the landing-place, when an Egyptian policeman, who could speak English, came up and told us it was certain death to drive down where we were going, as the mob were at their worst there, and were hauling the people out of the cabs and cutting their throats. We at once came to the conclusion that we would give up our drive, and went to the nearest consulate, where we waited till the disturbance was over."

A Greek gentleman who has escaped from Alexandria writes to the Times, under date Athens, June 22:—

"Although I have carefully read the daily issue of the Times up to that of Friday, June 16, I have seen no mention made of by far the most serious and cold-blooded feature of the riot in Alexandria on Sunday, June 11. I pass over the street fighting and the fact that the 'mustefezin,' at first passive though sympathetic spectators of the riot, ultimately joined in and killed many Europeans, and come at once to the essential point of my letter. During the riot, two soldiers were killed, and, their bodies having been taken to the guardhouse or 'caracole' in the principal street leading from the harbour to the square of Mehemet Ali, this so infuriated the soldiery there that a systematic butchery was commenced of all Europeans whose misfortune led them that way, peaceable citizens, many of whom had gone down to the harbour to see the ironclads, and others were out fishing. Several Arabs were employed by the soldiers to give warning of the approach of any carriage containing Europeans. On its arrival at the caracole it was stopped by an officer, the occupant made to descend on the pretence of searching him for arms, and he was immediately run through with bayonets from behind by the soldiers. The pockets were emptied of the money they contained, and this was quarrelled for by the soldiers. The body was then thrown into a place close by, the water-carriers washed up the blood, sand was thrown over the place, and the soldiers waited for fresh victims. Many people ran to this caracole for protection from the mob, and were without exception killed there by the soldiers. Also at the time there was a certain number of prisoners in the caracole, Rayahs or Turkish subjects, confined for various small offences; these were all brought out and murdered. Although the soldiers from Ras-el-Teen did not appear to quell the riot in the streets until five hours after it had commenced, this butchery at the caricole continued until long afterwards—namely, until after 11 p.m. The bodies during the night were packed into six ambulance waggons and taken and thrown into the sea. Lest you should think that I have been led into exaggeration, I beg to inform you most positively that these are facts which I can prove by the testimony of three independent eye-witnesses who were in hiding in the houses near the caracole, and saw everything, only escaping the next morning. One of them counted 132 Europeans killed before his eyes. Further proof, too, is afforded by the number of bodies which are being daily washed up from the sea, all showing bayonet wounds. It was the knowledge of these facts that caused ourselves with many other families to leave Alexandria, as we saw that those we had to fear most were the nominal guardians of order. It is possible that this may be well known in official circles, and is purposely kept back. It, however, remains with you, Sir, to decide whether or not to publish my letter in the Times. I could give you many more details, but, knowing the value of your space, abstain from doing so."

Mr. R. T. Bourne, barrister, of Rathfarnham, Dublin, has received a letter from his sister relative to the murder of her husband, Dr. H. P. Kibton, in the recent massacre at Alexandria. The bereaved widow writes:—"They have murdered my husband, and I am alone in the world, the only friends we had being killed with him. I know not what to do. All are flying, but where are we to fly to? My poor child saw her darling father killed, and was only saved herself by the mighty arm of God, being carried into a harem, where they kept her till late at night, then brought her home to me in disguise. May God remember them in the last day. Oh, what my poor child has gone through, and the blows the brutes gave her! I do not know how she is alive. I only learned yesterday that my darling was dead. I hoped against hope that he might have been taken to some hospital and so he was, but thrown naked on the ground and so mutilated that no one could know him."

IRELAND.

The Dublin correspondent of the Times writes on June 29: Mr. John H. Blake, J.P., of Rathvill, Kiltulla, Athenry, county Galway, agent to the Marquis of Clanricarde, and Mr. Thady Ruane, a bailiff, were shot dead at half-past 11 o'clock to-day, within half a mile of Loughrea. No arrests have been made. Mr. Blake was a magistrate of Galway. The murder was committed on the high road leading to Woodlawn. Mr. Blake was over 70 years of age, and had been agent over the estate for many years. He was highly respected by the gentry of the county, and was generally regarded by the tenants as fair and considerate. His murder, like many others, is distinctly traceable to the Land League agitation and the teaching of Michael Davitt and his confederates. The tenants, it is stated, had applied to Lord Clanricarde for an abatement of rent, which he peremptorily declined to give, and said that he would not be deterred by any combination from the assertion of his legal rights. Later intelligence from Tuam states that the deceased were murdered while going to attend mass at the Catholic chapel. Mrs. Blake, being on the opposite side of the car to her husband, escaped unharmed. When the bodies fell out of the car the horse proceeded slowly into town, Mrs. Blake being too agitated to drive. She was unable to give any account as to the number of the assassins. Soldiers were sent out to scour the country, but so far without result. It has been ascertained that three shots were fired.

Another murder was committed last evening at Ballinashee, within three miles of Ballyclare, county Antrim. According to one account a man named John M'Causland, of Belfast, who owns some property at Ballinashee, left Belfast last evening to visit that place. He was accompanied by a servant named Charles Larkin, who was driving the conveyance in which they were seated. At Ballinashee two or three men rushed out, one of whom attacked M'Causland with a scythe blade, and inflicted such frightful injuries that he soon died. Larkin was also very severely beaten, and lies in a precarious condition. A farmer in the district named M'Curry or M'Caudy has been arrested. Another account represents the affair as the result of a drunken quarrel.

Cardinal M'Cabe has addressed a well-timed political letter to the clergy of the archdiocese of Dublin, in which he asks them to invite the people to join in prayer for "our afflicted country," and says that an unnatural warfare rages through the land, and crimes that call loudly to Heaven for punishment stain the once holy soil of Ireland. After exhorting the people to contribute to the support of the Sovereign Pontiff, his Eminence adverts to the subject of the state of the country, and warns the people against the secret societies. He says, "Secret societies have been the direct enemies of the Church and her children, and against the preparators of these unholy combinations the denunciations of Popes have been unsparingly hurled; and, as you are aware, these denunciations have been strengthened by the severest spiritual punishment."

MR. WISKER ON QUEENSLAND TROUBLES.

Mr. John Wisker's paper on native troubles in Queensland and Polynesia in the current number of the Fortnightly Review has (says the Home News) attracted considerable attention at home, and has even been read—so Mr. Evelyn Ashley informed the House of Commons the other night, when questions were put on the subject by Mr. Cropper, Mr. O'Donnell, and Mr. Metge—by the officials of the Colonial Office. Mr. Wisker maintains that the employment of native police under white officers has much to do with the frontier difficulties in Queensland, and argues that "only to a disciplined body of white men can we look to the forbearance and restraint under trying circumstances which are everywhere the first qualities of a police force." With regard to the outrages committed by the native police, the Government, Mr. Evelyn Ashley says, have received no information, and the Daily News has taken this remark up, and asks, "What is the use of having a Governor in Queensland at all if on matters of such gravity he does not keep the Colonial Office duly informed as to what is taking place?" The fact that Sir Arthur Kennedy has not informed the Government of any fresh outrages leads colonists at home to believe that the so-called "facts" are greatly exaggerated. The Government, Mr. Ashley further said, was constantly urging the Queensland Government to amend its ways, and the Queensland Government issued local instructions to the black police to behave themselves. The Pall Mall Gazette says: "The Turkish Government might as well have replied to the remonstrances of the Powers after the Bulgarian atrocities by ordering copies of the Sermon on the Mount to be distributed among its Bashi-Bazouks." As to the complaints about kidnapping and the labour traffic, the Government were waiting for the arrival of Sir A. Gordon, when her Majesty's Government hoped to confer with him upon the subject.

SOUVENIRS OF THE VISIT OF SIR HENRY PARKES.

"Anglo-Australian," of the European Mail, writes:—"Sir Henry Parkes takes back with him to Australia two valuable sets of autographs, one for his private library, and the other for the Government Public Library or Parliament House Library. The former consists of a little red morocco birthday book, which contains the signatures of all the great kings, queens, and Royal princes, the great statesmen, poets, sculptors, and other eminent men that Sir Henry met in America, England, France, Belgium, and Germany, together with a few rare autograph letters of Oliver Cromwell and other men of the past; and the second, for the Government, consists of three large albums, containing the signatures of all the kings and queens of England, the great warriors, statesmen, musicians, and painters, and poets of former centuries, about 2000 altogether. These are valued at considerably more than £2000."

THE ARREST OF OGLE.

The Manchester police have apprehended an Irishman named Isaac Ogle, a native of Dublin, lately practising as a solicitor in Melbourne, on a charge of stealing a large sum of money and securities representing some thousands of pounds belonging to Joseph Gibbs Duffet, of Melbourne. Ogle and a woman named Brady, to whose sister he is married, were trying to obtain change for a large amount of bank-notes when they were arrested and taken to the Town Hall. They gave false names, but inquiries by telegraph in Dublin and London resulted in the information that Ogle was wanted for stealing bank-notes and securities. Upon the prisoners were found £955 in Bank of England notes, some gold, and a parcel of valuable securities relating to property in Australia. Ogle has been in England about a fortnight. The prisoners have been handed over to the Scotland-yard authorities.

PRINCE LEOPOLD ON THE PRESS.

The Duke of Albany (says an English paper) is developing into an extremely graceful and thoughtful speaker. His address at the Press Fund dinner on Saturday, June 24, has attracted much attention, owing to its felicity of diction and epigrammatic terseness of phraseology. The speeches of his Royal Highness suggest not merely culture and an extensive range of reading, but a high capacity for independent thinking. In an eminent degree they recall the addresses of his father, whose style he has evidently chosen as his model. Nothing could be more sensible than the keen discrimination with which the Duke sifted the truth from the falsehood in the heedless nonsense so often talked about the educative power of the Press. That power, he said, did not belong to it as an agency of controversy upon points on which people differ, but to it as an agency of instruction treating matters about which all good men agree with dignity of tone, breadth of view, and what Mr. Matthew Arnold would call "sweet reasonableness" of feeling. Of the press as "the brief chronicle" of the time, the Prince said many "good things," of which not the least remarkable was that in which he dwelt upon what the world owes to the enterprise of special correspondents. As he remarked, "One likes to know that some spectator of our race is always present when history is in the making, and that in scenes of danger and frenzy, where no one else ventures to stand, except at the call of urgent duty or in the fury of the fight, there is sure to be in the thick of everything an Englishman with a notebook whose only object is to see and to know."

A CURIOUS LIBEL CASE.

The Belt libel case is adjourned till November next. Mr. Belt is a sculptor of some distinction, against whom strong charges of artistic fraud have been brought. It is alleged he is an ignorant impostor whose reputation has

and
TASTEFULLY DESIGNED FAMILY MANSION, on
CROYDON RAILWAY STATION.
TORRENS' ACT TITLE.
It is most substantially BUILT of brick ornamental work, cemented stone foundations, slate roof; the walls are of more than ordinary thickness, and no expense has been spared in regard to the most complete and conveniently arranged FAMILY MANSION in the really attractive and vastly popular railway suburb, 20 minutes from the city.
The ACCOMMODATION comprises a wide entrance hall (the floor of which is beautifully laid with a tiled design in Minton tiles), a magnificent drawing-room, which consists of two rooms in one, and divided at pleasure by folding doors, a large dining-room, which opens on to a wide verandah, off the hall is a small ante-room, fitted with lavatory and other requirements; and at rear of main rooms is a passage (leading from the front hall), off which are good-sized pantry, servants' sitting-room, and at the end of said passage is a very roomy kitchen, which is replete with all modern requisites for cooking, &c.; next to the kitchen is a laundry with fireplace, fitted with hot and cold water pipes and three washing basins or tubs; above the kitchen, laundry, and breakfast room are three servants' bedrooms, also a roomy bath-room, supplied with hot and cold water.
On the first floor in the main building is a noble corridor, off which are three very large and airy bedrooms, linen room, and two suite of dressing-rooms adjoin the staircase that leads to the tower upon the roof, from which there is, without exception, the grandest view to be obtained in the delightful suburb, the rail-way line from Croydon to Parramatta, and eastward to Sydney; to the north-ward are Pennant Hills, Ryde, and the Parramatta River, and to the north-east and east are North Head, the Harbour, Balmain, the city, and eastern suburbs of Waverley, Darling Point, the Heads, Bondi, and the Pacific Ocean beyond, the whole forming one grand panorama which baffles description.
Detached is a large brick building, comprising four-stall stable, harness-room, carriage-house, hayloft, and man's room.
The water supply is abundant in all seasons, from well and very large tank.
The GROUNDS, in area 4 acres 3 roods, are tastefully arranged and laid out into grassy lawn in front of the residence (round which is a carriage drive well formed), fine vineyard of the choicest descriptions of grapes, very large orchard of the best class of fruit trees, and at the rear is a well-stocked vegetable garden, also grass paddock for cow and horse.
☞ It is but seldom now that such property as the above comes into the market for public sale, therefore those in search of such would do well to inspect it prior to the date mentioned, as instructions are imperative that a sale thereof must be effected.
INSPECTION is particularly invited, for which purpose CARDS to view can be obtained at the Rooms, Pitt-street.
Terms liberal at sale.

QUITE BEWILDERING, IS IT NOT?—What a number of advertisements, and each one claims to have the real thing, the genuine article, &c.! My SEWING-MACHINE is worn out, and I want a new one, as there must be improvements on the one I have had in use all these years, which am I to select?

The answer to this is, that what you now wish to do, thousands have been doing and are doing. Find some of these people and ask their opinion. We know many sensible ladies who have had the W. and G. MACHINE for about fifteen years, or even more, and they have gone through the market and eventually showing their sound discernment of character (which so distinguishes the ladies of our land, if they will only rely more on their own judgment), they have chosen the old friend again, with the modern improvements of the Automatic Tension, and other matters. Anyone in a quandary will be put right in a twinkling by the eloquence of these ladies in favour of their new friends of the old family of W. and G.
